GARNIER

LIVE Y.O

A person wearing a blue parka and jeans is holding a small, dark-colored dog in their arms. They are standing in a snowy environment, with snowflakes falling around them. The person is also wearing a red and white striped hat. The background is dark and blurry, suggesting a night scene.

BODY TOSS

RAPID REMEDIES

Q I want to learn badass driving moves. What's the best school for that?
—Steve O'Brian, via e-mail

A Buckle up, Steve, and burn rubber to the BeaveRun Motorsports Complex (beaverun.com). There you'll learn reverse 180s, barricade breaching, even car fighting.

Q My boys and I want to take the dopest ski trip possible. Any suggestions?—Robert Cass

A If you ever visited helicopterskiing.com, you'd know Ruby Mountain Helicopter Skiing will give you and 15 friends access to 200,000 acres of unpopulated back country. Now, that's rad.

WHAT'S THE BEST WAY TO DO A WALL FLIP?

—Chris Smith, Columbus, Ohio

1 Focus on a chest-high point on the wall and run toward it at moderate speed. Plant the foot you normally jump off (if you're a righty, it's most likely your left) five feet away from the wall and start leaning back.

3 Next, "drive your trailing leg upward as hard as you can," says Berry. "That knee will make a circle and end up in your chest, providing the rotation." While spinning, "look for the ground and your torso will follow."

2 Push into the wall with your lead foot, lean back, and spring off your trailing leg. "If your body's horizontal, you've made it past the hardest bit," says Ashton Berry, who runs screwgravity.com.

4 Bend your knees as you hit the ground to absorb the landing and retain balance. A smooth flip and landing takes practice to perfect, and it can be downright crippling if botched, so have a friend spot you at first, a fat friend.

DEBATE SETTLER

Could a boy really be raised by wolves?—J. Johnson, Chicago, Illinois

A Not likely. Kids who've been isolated from human contact are called feral children, but experts debate the circumstances of their condition. "Most credible reports of feral children are cases of confinement or social isolation from humans," says

Leonard LaPointe, a professor of communication disorders at Florida State University. "But many reports of children supposedly raised by animals are hoaxes." L. David Mech, a research biologist specializing in wolf ecology, also finds wolf mothers unlikely:

"Wolves have a very large territory, and they travel around a lot. They only raise their pups in a den for eight weeks, hardly the length of a human childhood. A wolf would probably eat a small child." Note: He said probably.

He's a real half-animal in bed

THE FIXER

Life's too short to attempt to solve all your problems yourself. Tell us what ails you, and we'll send in a pro to sort things out.

THE FIX

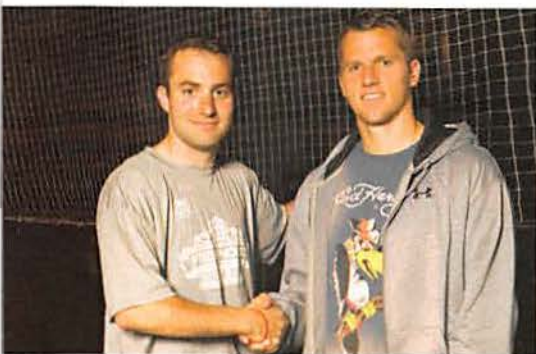

We send the New York Red Bulls' Seth Stammer to help Tom's team light up the board. It's a one-game deal, so if you get your asses handed to you in the playoffs, don't come a-complainin'.

THE SETUP

Seth keeps a low profile as he takes the field and only turns it on when Tom's team goes down a goal...which is the case four times.

THE WIN

With the help of Seth's superior skills, Tom's inept gang of five is going into the postseason—proof that cheating is victory's best friend.

SELF-HELP

BALL CONTROL

New York Red Bull Seth Stammer scores you some solid advice.

Feel the Burn

The most important muscle to stretch is the groin. If you don't, it'll put both your game and your Johnson on the bench for weeks.

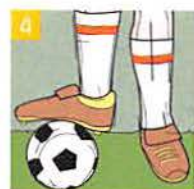

Go Both Ways

If you're right-foot-dominant, practice shooting with your left at least 15 minutes before a game, lest you become a one-trick pony.

Keep It Simple

Trickery complicates your game. When pressured, always pass in the direction you're facing, and leave the fancy footwork to the pros.

Control the Ball

There's nothing more important than first touch—when you initially receive the ball. Get that down, then worry about impressing the girlfriend.

GET FIXED Have a problem that needs solving? Send in your sob story to fixer@maxim.com and we might send in the Fixer to sort things out.

MOVIE OF THE MONTH

Flags of Our Fathers

Clint Eastwood doubles down with this WWII epic.

There are two sides to every story. And Clint Eastwood plans to tell them both, unfurling Flags of Our Fathers, the first of an ambitious pair of films that will examine the Battle of Iwo Jima from the American and Japanese perspectives. Flags, based on the book by James Bradley and Ron Powers, tells the harrowing tale of the grunts who died raising the Stars and Stripes over Iwo Jima and the aftermath for the men who lived to tell the tale. (The Japanese version, about the men who fought to their deaths, will be told in Letters From Iwo Jima, which should be out sometime next year.) As with most double-disc rap albums, putting out two movies could be one too many, but with crusty Clint at the helm and a gang of up-and-coming actors in the cast, this has too much firepower to bomb.

OPINION

Pete's Picks!

Pete Hammond demystifies your trip to the multiplex.

Borat

Out: Nov. 3

Sacha Baron Cohen's Kazakh reporter travels across America to make the most controversial and hilarious film any studio will release this year.

Babel

Out: Oct. 27

This film weaves several international plot lines, examines the clash of civilizations...and features Brad Pitt. One of these things is not like the others...

Stranger than Fiction

Out: Nov. 10

Will Ferrell plays an IRS auditor who has to avoid being killed off by the female voice he hears in his head. It's just like being married, really.

The Prestige

Out: Oct. 20

Two magicians battle each other to see who has the most tricks up his sleeve, until things go horribly wrong and someone ends up in a tank top.

Running With Scissors

Out: Oct. 11

This adaptation of Augusten Burroughs' memoir about life with a deranged psychiatrist is like a "how not to parent" guide. Bring a note pad.

FYI

The number of takes Stanley Kubrick made Shelley Duvall to get a single scene in The Shining done to his liking—a record, folks!

*Kiele Sanchez

Meet the reason no one on Lost is sad being stuck on the island.

What a difference a year makes. Last fall Kiele Sanchez was getting her ass kicked by Lost, with ABC's island adventure pummeling her girly WB drama, Related, into cancellation. This year? She's kicking ass on Lost, making the castaways' hearts race. This half-Puerto Rican, half-French 29-year-old may be new to the island, but her journey began six years ago after she lost the finals of MTV's "I Want to Be a VJ" contest. Luckily, an agent saw something in Kiele that MTV's viewers missed, helping her land roles in the movie Stuck on You, NBC's Four Kings, and starting this month, one of the best shows on TV. Pretty crafty, eh?

VA BENE!

Before her big break, Kiele was in the play Tony 'n' Tina's Wedding.

BUST OUT THE ICEHOUSE. BUST INTO MAXIM.

Last Night of Freedom in Florida

Spence was the first to get hitched, so we made sure his bachelor party was off the hook. We rented a sweet stretch limo, but the future Mrs. Spence kept trying to horn in on our night. After the sixth call in an hour, we finally wrestled away his phone and confiscated it for the night. She may own Spence for the rest of his life, but tonight, the guys run the show.

Find out how your crew could score your pre-party pics and stories in Maxim. Go to icehouse.com for details.

Icehouse is brewed colder and longer for the premium quality and taste you need when you're cranking it up a notch with the guys.

Beck

The Information (Interscope)

No matter how many sequined jumpsuits Beck wears in his videos, he's never going to be confused with the king of rock'n'roll. But Beck's yard-sale velvet Elvis impression keeps getting better with age. On his latest he serves up slacker rhymes over oddball percussion—the perfect soundtrack for a Sunday afternoon spent putting a man-size dent in the couch with a bag of Doritos. The Information—which includes lo-fi videos for all 15 songs and a sticker kit so you can make your own album cover—feels more like Mellow Gold than anything Beck's done in the 12 years since.

Where you're at: Just a half-hour north of the U.S.-Mexico border, San Diego boasts year-round springlike temperatures, 70 miles of pristine beaches (with some of the gnarliest waves in the Pacific), and the tastiest Mexican dishes this side of Salma Hayek. Time to siesta and fiesta, eh, cabrone?

Street scene is a rad local music event. Dig it.

THE WEEKENDER

2,880 Minutes in San Diego

This town has killer surf and natural blondes—so what if its name doesn't mean whale's vagina?

Barrel racing, Call-style

1 CRASH Tower 23 Hotel

This is San Diego's only sleek, ultraluxe hotel located right on the beach (doubles from $300). People looking for hot nightlife and pretty locals will love the swank rooms and prime location. (tower23hotel.com)

Surfer Beach Hotel

Steps from the city's best breaks, this boutique hotel's retro-California rooms (doubles from $150) overlook the massive pool—ideal for crash-and-burners who need to soak up some vitamin D but don't want sand in their hair or the dog. (surferbeachhotel.com)

2 EAT Gaslamp Strip Club

Grill your own slab of meat on a communal BBQ at this hip adults-only steakhouse ($14–$22). The bar shakes up 300 martinis and Vargas pinups adorn the walls, making it the perfect spot for you and the guys to sample all kinds of hot flesh. (340 5th Avenue, 619-231-3140)

South Beach Bar & Grill

Fish tacos are a culinary delight that may frighten gringos who only know Chili's. Widen up your palate at South Beach in hippie-dippy Ocean Beach—locals suggest grubbing hard on the grilled mahimahi version ($5). (5059 Newport Avenue, 619-226-4577)

3 DRINK Turf Supper Club

The 1950s live on at this retro bar in booming South Park/Golden Hill. The girls have jet-black hair, the cocktails hit like a stiff right cross, and the jukebox blares everything from Etta James to the Squirrel Nut Zippers. (1116 25th Street, 619-234-6363)

Stingaree

This joint is a multimillion-dollar three-story megaclub on par with anything you'd find in Vegas—including floor-to-ceiling waterfalls, a rooftop bar, and sexy clientele, dominated by the blonde beach bunnies you spent all day hitting on. So look sharp! (stingsandiego.com)

4 SEE La Jolla Shores

Whether you're a total grommet or a seasoned soul surfer, live out the dream of hollowing out 10-foot barrels at this prime surf spot...or break your surf cherry on a long board, which you can rent from Star Surfing Company. ($20/day, 858-273-7827)

Whale Watching

Winter is the peak of whale-watching season in San Diego, when 26,000 gray whales make their way to Baja. Salute God's majestic underwater giants by hoisting a beer on the deck of one of Dana Wharf Sportfishing's schooners. ($25, 800-590-9994)

Blends

Sneakerheads, rejoice—Blends' dope limited-edition kicks (like November's Reebok NPC Pump UK Blends Hybrid) are available only at this East Village 'hood shop. They don't ship, so your Blends Original will be one of a kind in Omaha. (726 Market St, 619-233-6126)

Good to Know!

■ There's a reason every bar in Tijuana, Mexico hangs a sign warning, NO FIGHTING! YOU DON'T WANT TO END UP IN A MEXICAN PRISON. If you cross the border for a night of tequila poppers and, uh, donkey shows, don't give any burly guys the stink eye.

Midway [Xbox 360, PS3]

Drenched in blood and violence, John Woo's Hard Boiled became an instant cult classic. Expect this video game sequel to Woo's epic action flick to do the same. You play as Inspector Tequila, Chow Yun-Fat's stone-faced detective with balls of steel, who has to battle his way through the criminal underworld in both Chicago and Hong Kong to find his ex-wife, who's been kidnapped by a Russian mob boss. Crammed with more guns, violence, and nonstop carnage than a weekend in Fallujah, Stranglehold takes full advantage of the next-gen consoles' processing power, making each enemy kill feel as real as a hot slug to the gut. Lock and load, motherfucker.

THE PROFILE #2

Snoop
*Dogg

This month the world of children's books gets gangsta love.

J.K. Rowling and Harry Potter better watch out—Snoop Dogg is gunning for 'em. On October 17, the multifaceted rapper is gonna go where no gangsta has gone before: the children's book aisle. That's the day Snoop drops his debut novel, Love Don't Live Here No More, cowritten with five-time NAACP Award-winning playwright David E. Talbert.

All the Dogfather's Children

"I look at the kids every day and think, How can I reach 'em?" Snoop says. "How can I give 'em something that can hold their attention for days and months and years? And that's a book."

Those stay with you a long time." The book that stuck with Snoop was Souder, the 1970 Newbury Award-winning classic by William H. Armstrong. "That book was the shit to me," he says.

Readin', Writin', Rappin'

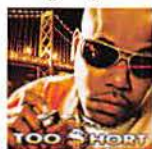

The move into publishing launches "Doggy Tales," Snoop's new line of kids' books, adding another notch in the rapper's ever-expanding brand portfolio, which includes everything from pornography to a youth football league. But just because Snoop is broadening his business ventures doesn't mean he's forgotten how to do what got him in the game—rapping. For the past year he's been working with superproducers like Pharrell, Timbaland, and Rick Rock, putting the finishing touches on his eighth solo record, The Blue Carpet Treatment. The album is a return to form for Snoop, who goes back to his roots, rapping about gang violence and reuniting with his mentor, Dr. Dre.

But can a man who writes children's books still keep it real? Snoop doesn't think it's an issue. "I don't do shit halfway, so it's not like I'm reaching out to shit that don't fit me," he says, adding with a laugh, "I'm Snoop Dogg! I can do whatever I wanna do!"

THE SELECTOR

Sugary cereals and books about 'bangers—these are a few of Snoop's favorite things.

"Keep Bouncin'"
"Will.i.am came in and took this song to another level."

Blue Rage, Black Redemption
"It's about gangbanging and what he went through as a kid."

Honeycomb
"It was the shit when I was a boy, and it's still the shit."

Converse Chuck Taylor All Stars
"I've been wearing these sneakers since I was seven."

Madea Goes to Jail
"I love all the shit Tyler Perry do. Madea's a big star!"

Madden NFL 07
"That new lead-blocking shit is cool, huh? My boy scored four touchdowns."

There are a lot of great steakhouses in America. Here, the 10 best.

< Gene & Georgetti Chicago, IL

The meat at this Italian-style steakhouse (and Sinatra hang-out) is so tender they don't provide steak knives, merely a sharpened butter knife.

< Strip House New York, NY

As the name implies, this place has more than meat on its mind—silhouettes of naked women adorn the napkins—but the 20-ounce strip gets 'em drooling.

< The Forge Miami, FL

For 70 years, mobsters have indulged their meat tooth at this decadent Miami institution, known for nude oil paintings and a wine cellar with 380,000 bottles.

< Bern's Steak House Tampa, FL

Here's how meat-obsessed Bern's is: Their waiters train for a full year before they can sell you the châteaubriand.

< Dickie Brennan's Steak House New Orleans, LA

This French Quarter institution was nearly destroyed by Hurricane Katrina, but after some serious reconstruction their 16-ounce strip hot off a cast-iron skillet is back!

< Peter Luger Brooklyn, NY

Since 1887 people have raved about Luger's. Try the porterhouse and see what everyone will be talking about for the next 119 years.

A mother hears a humming sound coming from her daughter's bedroom, so she opens the door and finds her daughter naked on the bed, working a vibrator. "What the hell are you doing?" the mom asks.

"I'm 35, and I still live at home with my parents. This is the closest I'll ever get to a husband," replies the daughter.

Later that week the father hears the humming and finds his daughter with the vibrator. "What are you doing?" he asks.

"I'm 35, and I still live at home with my parents. This is the closest I'll ever get to a husband," replies the daughter.

A few days later the mother hears the humming coming from the den, so she bursts into the room and sees her husband on the couch, watching TV with the vibrator buzzing away next to him.

"What in God's name are you doing?" she asks.

SUPERCARS >

RIDES OF THE YEAR 2006

Five reasons to celebrate the existence of the combustion engine.

FORD SHELBY GT500

A '60s muscle car legend makes its comeback, this time with 500 horsepower.

There's a certain kind of person who hears the phrase "fastest factory-built Mustang ever" and sheds a tear. That person is called a man. The Shelby's 500 snarling ponies come courtesy of a supercharged engine tweaked out with an intercooler, custom camshafts, and the aluminum heads from the Ford GT supercar. Even better, it delivers its road-rippling torque (480 lb.-ft. at max) all over the tach, so the car is both endlessly powerful and surprisingly drivable. But the grunt from up front isn't all that makes this car the stud in the 'Stang stable. Lucky owners get more precise handling, meatier four-piston Brembo brakes, and a retuned suspension. The latter makes the best of the solid rear axle the GT500 shares with its lesser siblings, but it still twitches and bucks during hard cornering if the wheels hit a bump, pothole, or squirrel carcass. Hey, nobody said riding the biggest bronco around would be easy.

BMW
M6

So fast and beautiful, people won't think you're a prick.

Is the most amazing thing about the M6 the terrifying power, the exacting German refinement, or the Ferrari-worthy looks? The answer is yes. BMW's latest entry in its M catalog is a high-revving racer in a grand tourer's clothes, delivering 383 lb.-ft. of torque at 6,100 rpm en route to a lofty 8,250 rpm red line. Impressive, but the coolest feature is a console "Power" button that changes the engine from a 400 hp monster into a 500-pony, um, even bigger monster. Hit the wheel-mounted MDrive switch to ditch the dynamic stability control nanny and sharpen throttle response, then wrap your fingers around the wheel and settle on the paddle shifters. Now you're in a well-appointed F1 racer that seats four. Well, two humans up front and two torsos in back. But with this ride, who needs friends?

CADILLAC ESCALADE

Whether out of love or fear, this ride is guaranteed to get you respect.

Out of every car on the road today, no other whip fits in just as well parked outside the club as it does at the golf course like the all-new Escalade. Besides the sleek redesign, this top-shelf SUV inspires envy with its big pushrod V-8, mated to GM's new six-speed auto, that easily launches it past the less bling-worthy. And they'll know what's coming, thanks to a gleaming grill dominated by a grapefruit-size Cadillac emblem that screams, "Make way for the king." Inside, creamy leather, along with trim pieces made of wood, aluminum, and chrome, befit the throne of a big-timer such as yourself. Just make sure to budget some extra green beyond the $55 large base price so you can check off the options that make the Escalade into a real 'Slade: touch-screen navigation system ($2,695), DVD entertainment system ($1,895), and those smooth 22-inch chrome rims ($2,995). But no worries, right? Because when you roll, you'll be rolling correct.

An affordable off-roader that makes its grandpappy proud. Toyota introduced the FJ Cruiser concept at the 2003 Detroit auto show, then magically decided to build the homage to its legendary FJ 40, last made in 1983. In 4x4 configuration, the Cruiser's 9.6 inches of ground clearance, skid-plated underbody, and beefy suspension dominate trails. BEST USE OF AN ELEMENT

Jaguar XK

Cars, like strippers, inevitably get much heavier as they age, mostly due to growth in size and the addition of needless features. But the brand-new 2006 XK actually weighs less than its predecessor—262 pounds less in the case of the coupe—because Jaguar ditched the old steel bones for an all-aluminum unibody (assembled using multiple stampings, extrusions, and castings, if you must know). The result is a faster, better-handling car, all in a skin that's never looked sexier.

A CAR IS BORN

Saab design director Anthony Lo takes us through the process of creating the Aero X concept car. Class is in session, son.

1 BACK TO BASICS

"About 50 different proposals were created after two weeks of sketching. We chose the winner because its extreme proportions, canopy opening, and turbo-fan wheels all expressed Saab's aviation roots."

2 MINI MODEL

"The clay-scale-model process took about two months, because you never get it in one go. We did two scale models, but we didn't show the other to the public. We might use features from it for another project."

3 THE BIG TIME

"The life-size model is built on a steel frame with foam inside. The clay is maybe 10 cm thick. Normally you need at least four people to sculpt a full-size clay model, but our modeler did it himself by hand."

4 POP THE TOP

"The canopy took three to four months to figure out. Other canopy concepts need nine feet of vertical space to open, but the Aero X's needs only six feet, so you can open it in a standard garage."

5 ROLL OUT

"Then we sent the project to G-Studios in Italy for engineering. From start to showing at Geneva last March was about a year."

AMERICAN DREAM >

Tip your Chinese delivery guy—he might owe gangsters $75K.

For thousands of immigrants smuggled into the U.S., getting here's the easy part.

Setting the hook
Imagine breaking your ass every day in a rice paddy for 12 months and having $285 to show for the effort. That's how much farmers in China bank each year. Suddenly the idea of risking your life to get smuggled into America seems like a great idea. Snakeheads, the criminals who arrange the smuggling, prey on peasants who dream of climbing out of a shithole existence. By promising the yokels that they'll pull in five grand a month working in the States, snakeheads make the $60-$75K smuggling fee seem affordable. If the peasants don't have that kind of jack, they go to loan sharks, who cover the fee and charge five percent in interest a month. Not as nefarious as most credit card companies—then again, Visa representatives won't go to your house and break your sister's femur if you default.

One nasty commute

A lucky few immigrants make their way to America by plane using falsified visas and passports. In the 1990s, packing a fishing trawler full of aliens for a grueling two-month journey was the norm. According to Steven Wong, the head of the Lin Zexu Foundation, a Chinatown community activist group, "In the late 1980s and early 1990s, the snakeheads used Taiwanese fishing boats. Most don't die on the trip over, but it happens. Females get gang-raped, and some commit suicide. I heard of one woman who struggled to prevent getting raped, so [the crew] stopped giving her food," says Wong. "She understood that she was going to be raped anyway, so she ate their food because she needed the energy to get up after the rape and jump into the ocean."

Snakeheads make waves

In June 1993 a ship named Golden Venture packed with 286 migrants ran aground near Queens, New York. Ten people drowned trying to swim for shore, and the rest ended up in custody. The snakehead in charge, Cheng Chui Ping, known as Sister Ping around New York's Chinatown, was finally captured in April 2000. An illegal immigrant herself, Cheng turned snakehead sometime after landing in New York City via Canada in 1981. Prosecutors claimed her operation, run out of her restaurant, Yeung Sun on East Broadway, was worth $40 million at its

THE BASICS

Snakeheads

When they started

These specialized Chinese gangsters have smuggled immigrants out of China's Fujian province since the early 1980s. Back then the smugglers would bring migrants into British-controlled Hong Kong, where, to cross the barbed-wire-fortified border, they had to wriggle on their bellies like snakes, hence the moniker.

Their numbers

Nobody knows how many snakeheads are slithering around, but one study estimates as many as 500,000 illegal Chinese immigrants have been smuggled into the U.S. since the late 1980s.

What do they charge?

In the late '80s, getting smuggled into the country cost $25,000. Today it hovers around $75,000.

Today's numbers

The U.S. has spent $667 million detaining Chinese illegals. China refuses to take them back.

peak. Increased security and heightened awareness ruined the party for the mass-transit smuggle. Now a vast majority of immigrants make their way through the porous Mexican border, or, much worse, groups of up to 20 aliens spend a couple of weeks packed into 40-foot shipping containers bound for a West Coast port. Car batteries attached to fans keep the air moving while they subsist on canned food and take turns crapping in a bucket.

Living the dream

Once a smugglee hits American pavement, the clock to start paying off his debt starts ticking. If the alien doesn't have a job or a plan to get a job to start paying off his debt within a week, the snakeheads get to work. "The snakeheads won't kill you, because then they won't get the money," says Ko-lin Chin, Ph.D., a criminal justice professor and the author of Smuggled Chinese: Clandestine Immigration to the United States. "If you're female it's sexual assault. If you're male, they shackle them to a bed and beat them. They will hit them on the head with a hammer, first placing a book on their head so there's no bleeding." Each migrant represents a sizable investment. Trafficking humans across international borders, even in hellish conditions, costs money. "If you're a snakehead," adds Chin, "you collect the money, end of story."

Snakeheads have no problem at all keeping a migrant chained in a drop house for a couple of months, kicking the shit out of him until he feels like looking for a job. The typical alien spends five years working 12-hour days, six days a week, in menial jobs, dodging the specter of deportation and funneling money back home to pay off his debt. Most huddle up with 11 others in a one-bedroom apartment, subsisting off of the $200 a month they get to keep. It may be a better deal than getting crushed by tanks in Tiananmen Square, but just barely.

That sassy hostess down at T.G.I. Friday's isn't the only hard target in the world. When the military needs to take out a bunker, options are limited. The laws of physics dictate that no rocket, regardless of speed or payload, can cut through reinforced concrete that is four times thicker than the missile is long. But the Army's Armament Research Development and Engineering Center just served physics a frosty mug of shut-the-fuck-up. Witness Deep Digger, America's most prolific producer of busted bunkers and sexual innuendo. The rocket starts out slow, hovering over its target on a parachute, then speeds up the action, firing explosive rounds from seven cannons in its nose cone to literally mine through bedrock or concrete. Taking its time, it explodes only after it's reached the sweet, sweet target—a buried bunker. Deep Digger then promises to call but never does, further lowering enemy morale.

Drug Mules Get Stung

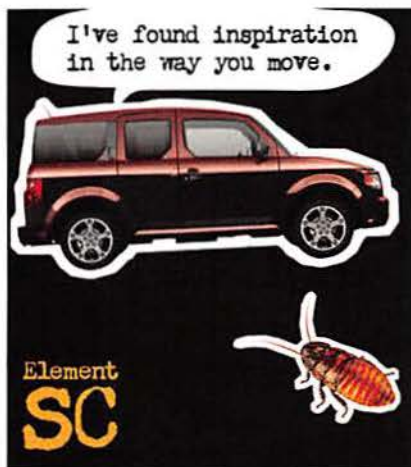

Now you have another reason to torch wasps—they're narcs!

"I'm dying to bang Jeff Goldblum."

In 10 years the concept of a drug-sniffing dog will seem flat-out quaint. Researchers at the University of Georgia have developed the Wasp Hound, a system that uses parasite wasps to seek out contraband. Scientists can train the wasps to associate specific chemicals with food—the process takes about 30 minutes. They then slip the bugs into a ventilated pipe fitted with a microcamera that tracks their movements. When the wasps detect the chemical that they think of as food, they go bat-shit. The camera picks up on the movement and triggers an alarm. After 48 hours on the job, the wasps fly away, free to find caterpillars to impregnate with their young that will later eat their hosts from the inside out. But when the public found out that Uncle Sam roughs up insurgents and terror suspects at Guantánamo Bay, in Afghanistan, and allegedly at secret locations that don't take visitors from the Red Cross, the people piped up.

Since the war on terror began, interrogation techniques have included everything from sleep deprivation to close encounters with attack dogs (and even one surly West Virginia woman). But the United States has signed numerous treaties, starting with the Geneva Convention in 1929, unconditionally outlawing the practice of torturing enemy captives. The Bush White House, however, views terrorists as "unlawful combatants"—since they don't fight by the rules of the Geneva Conventions, the rules do not protect them. But human rights activists and some U.S. politicians, Sen. John McCain in particular, disagree. McCain's Detainee Treatment Act of 2006 was designed to put an end to interrogation by torture.

After ratifying the law, Bush issued a "signing statement" that allows him to interpret the act as he sees fit. The verbiage adds up to, "It's a war. I'm the president. Send a box of thumb screws to Baghdad."

Is it acceptable to beat a detainee within an inch of his life on the slim chance that he possesses vital information? Is torture OK even though we signed a pact that states, "No exceptional circumstances whatsoever, whether a state of war or a threat of war" exist to allow the practice? You do the moral math.

[Pro]

Tucker Carlson, host of Tucker With Tucker on MSNBC

"In 1995 Filipino authorities arrest a guy named Abdul Murad. They torture him. He admits that he was planning to bring down 11 American airliners... Torture is bad. Keep in mind, some things are worse. And under certain circumstances, it may be the lesser of two evils."

Alan Dershowitz, Harvard law professor
"Under my proposal, no torture would be permitted without a 'torture warrant' being issued by a judge... A torture warrant would have to be based on the absolute need to obtain immediate information in order to save lives coupled with probable cause that the suspect had such information and is unwilling to reveal it."

[Con]

Senator John McCain (R-Ariz.)

"The abuse of prisoners harms, not helps, our war effort. In my experience, abuse of prisoners often produces bad intelligence, because under torture a person will say anything he thinks his captors want to hear—whether it is true or false—if he believes it will relieve his suffering."

Right or Wrong?

Depends on which talking head you believe.

Kenneth Roth, head of Human Rights Watch

"The absolute prohibition against torture is a well-established precept of... international law. Torture is never permissible against anyone, whether in times of peace or of war. The prohibition against torture is firmly established under human rights law...and various treaties to which the United States is a party."

TAX & SPEND!

The USAF's newest killing machine, the F-22A, costs $338 million a bird.

Death's Shiny Horses

Ten pieces of aero-tech that let America rule the skies and look good doing it.

1 F-22A Raptor

With supersonic cruising speed (it tops out around Mach 2.4) and eight air-to-air missiles, this next-gen fighter hunts for what the Air Force refers to as "first-kill opportunities."

6 F-16 Fighting Falcon

First deployed in 1979, the latest two updates of the Falcon, the F-16C and the F-16D, produce 27,000 pounds of thrust and close in on targets at a respectable 1,500 mph.

2 B-2 Spirit

Capable of dropping nukes or 40,000 pounds of conventional bombs, the B-2 flew 49 sorties in Iraq during Operation Iraqi Freedom. Twenty-two of those attacks started from Missouri.

7 F-14D Tomcat

Maverick's ride can drop laser-guided bombs as well as send Phoenix missiles shrieking out to soon-to-be-no-longer-flying bogies on the same mission. (RIP, Goose.)

3 B-1B Lancer

They cost $283 million a pop, but the Lancer's ability to carry 24 Mk 84 1,000-pound bombs (the biggest payload of any bird in the USAF) makes it one of our most cost-effective killers.

8 F-15 Eagle

Introduced in 1972 to punk Soviet MiGs, these $30 million birds destroyed Scud missile sites and notched 34 of the USAF's 37 air-to-air victories in Operation Desert Storm. Hoo-ah!

4 A-10 Thunderbolt II

Also known as the Warthog, the A-10 sports a buffet of weaponry including Maverick missiles, incendiary cluster bombs, and a 30 mm Gatling that spits 3,900 rounds per minute.

9 F/A-18 E/F Super Hornet

The ability to operate from aircraft carriers as well as carry all 26 bombs and missiles in the Navy's armory makes it easy to understand why this bird is slowly phasing out the Tomcat.

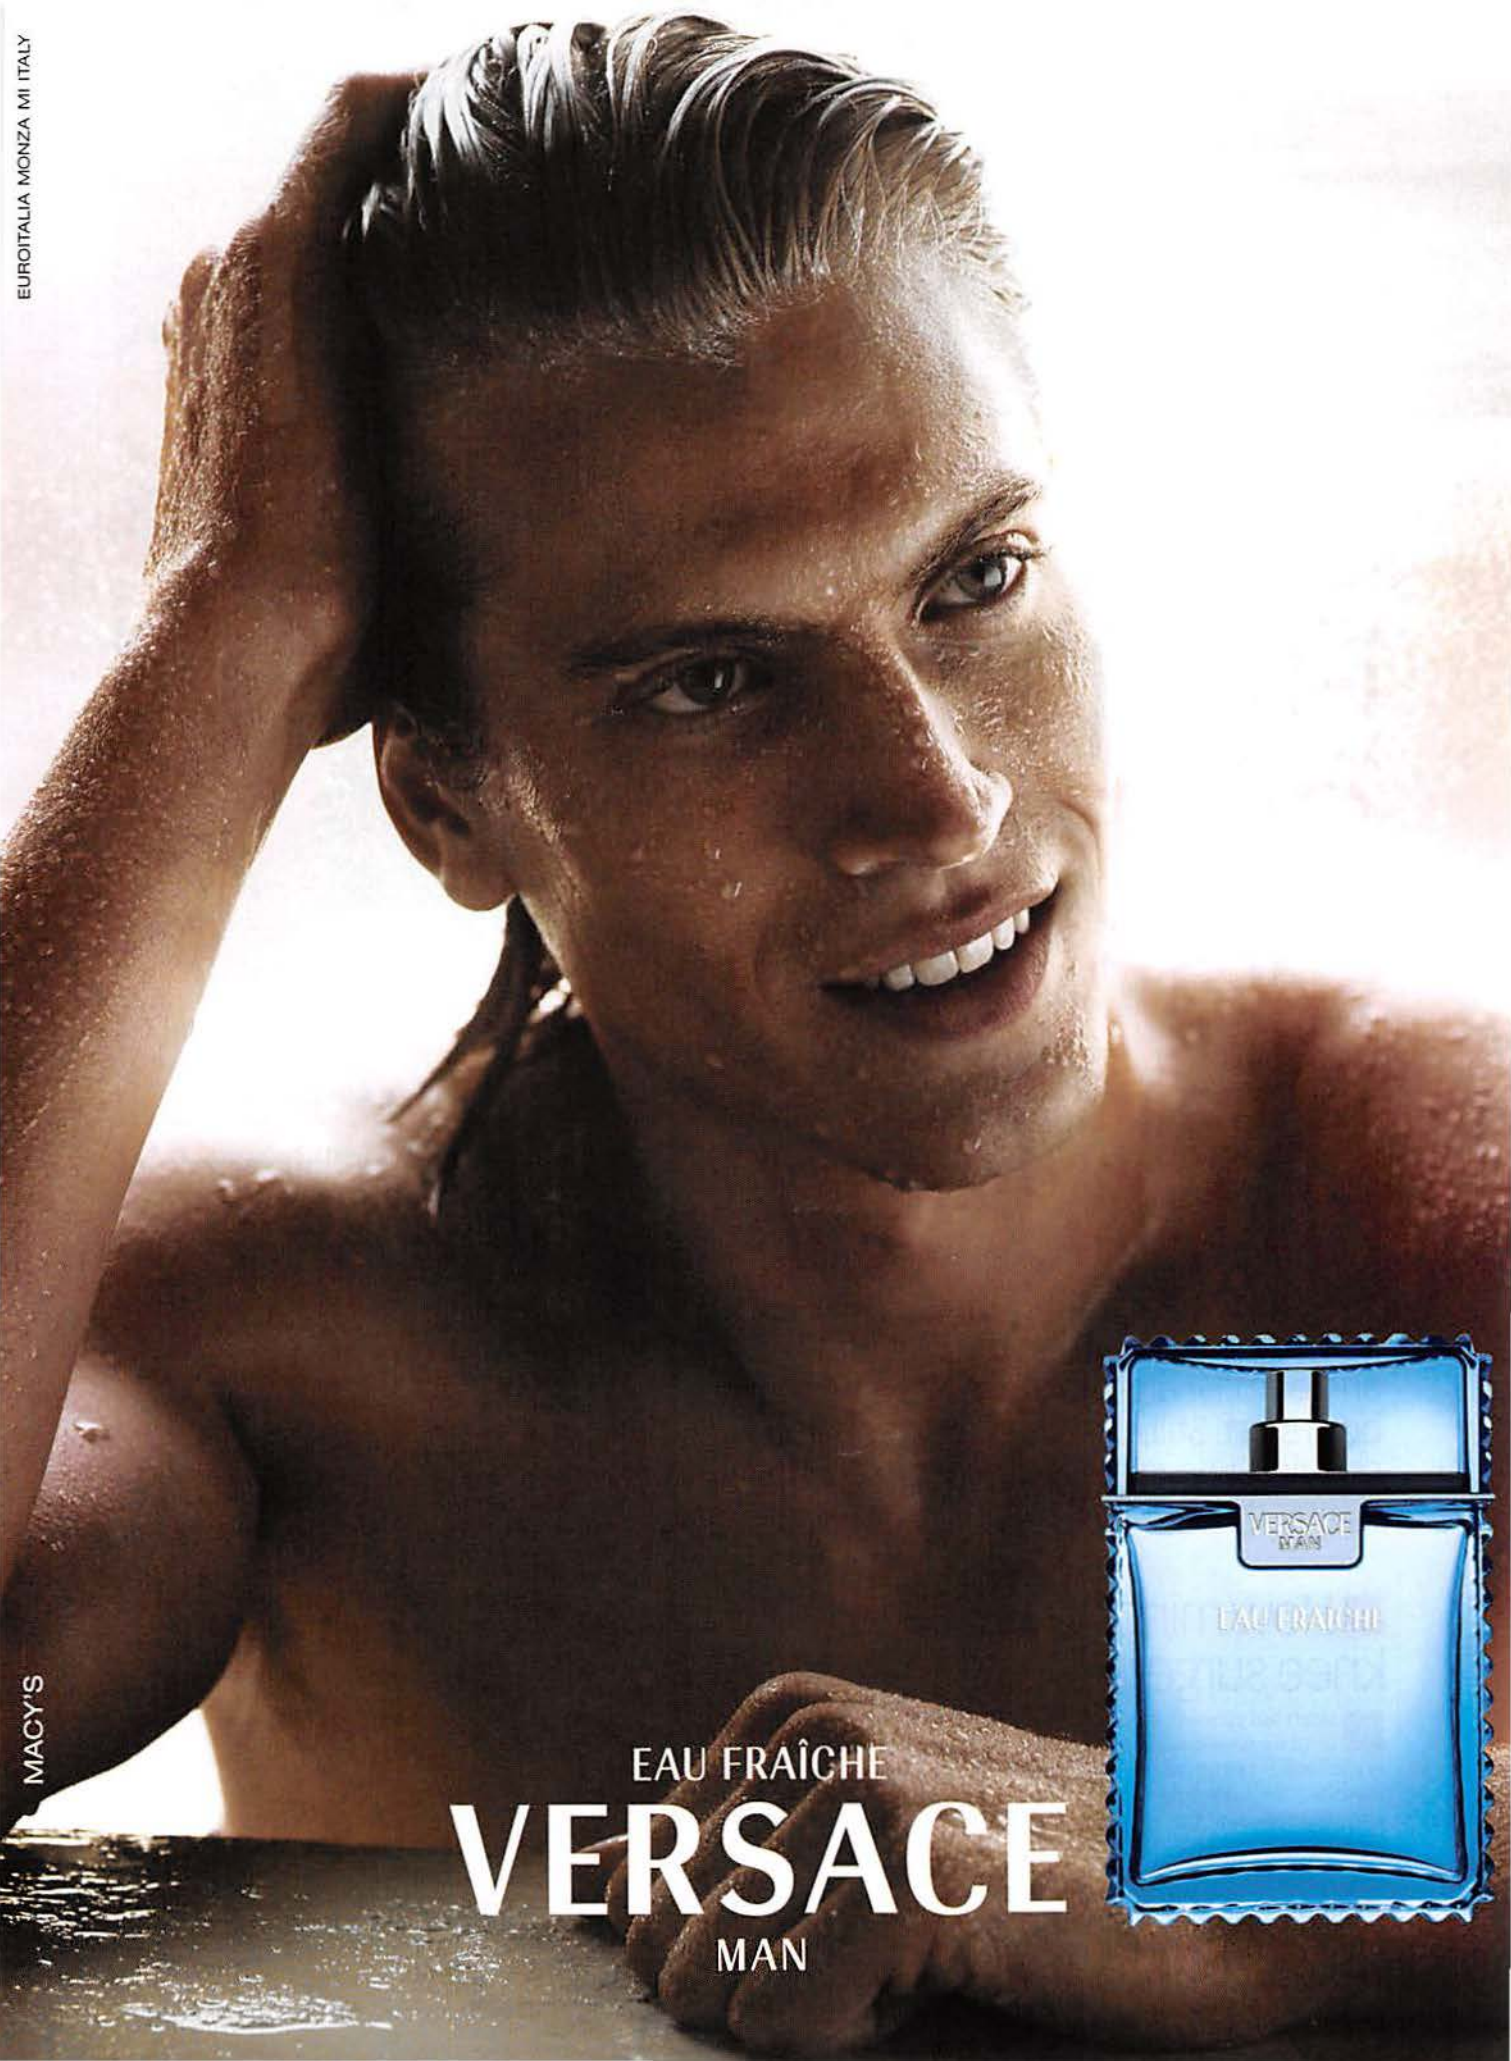

5 F-117A Nighthawk

'Hawks only operate at night, when their unique shape (which earned them the nickname the Wobblin' Goblin), dark paint, and radar-absorbent skin make them nearly invisible.

10 B-52H Stratofortress

The USAF currently has 94 Strats in operation. This bird started raining hell in 1955, but your grandpa wouldn't recognize the 20 nuclear cruise missiles it can carry today.

Ballin' 2006 NBA Preview

You aren't going to tune in to any one game until April, when the playoffs and earnest attempts at defense both start. Still, that doesn't mean you shouldn't have anything to talk about during the regular season.

Q How minor was Kobe's knee surgery?

A Don't kid yourself—eight to 12 weeks is just a really nice way of saying two to six months. Kobe's mid-July surgery to remove scar tissue from his knee gets him back halfway through training camp—if he has no physical setbacks or pesky lawsuits. Without a summer full of pickup hoops and logging hours in the gym, he'll spend the rest of 2006 getting back into game shape. There are still years of 40-point games left in those 28-year-old legs, but Nicholson should invest in some floor seats for Elton Brand and the Clippers, at least until the All-Star break.

The 'fro is gone, the hops remain

Q Is Big Ben Chicago's new ring-maker?

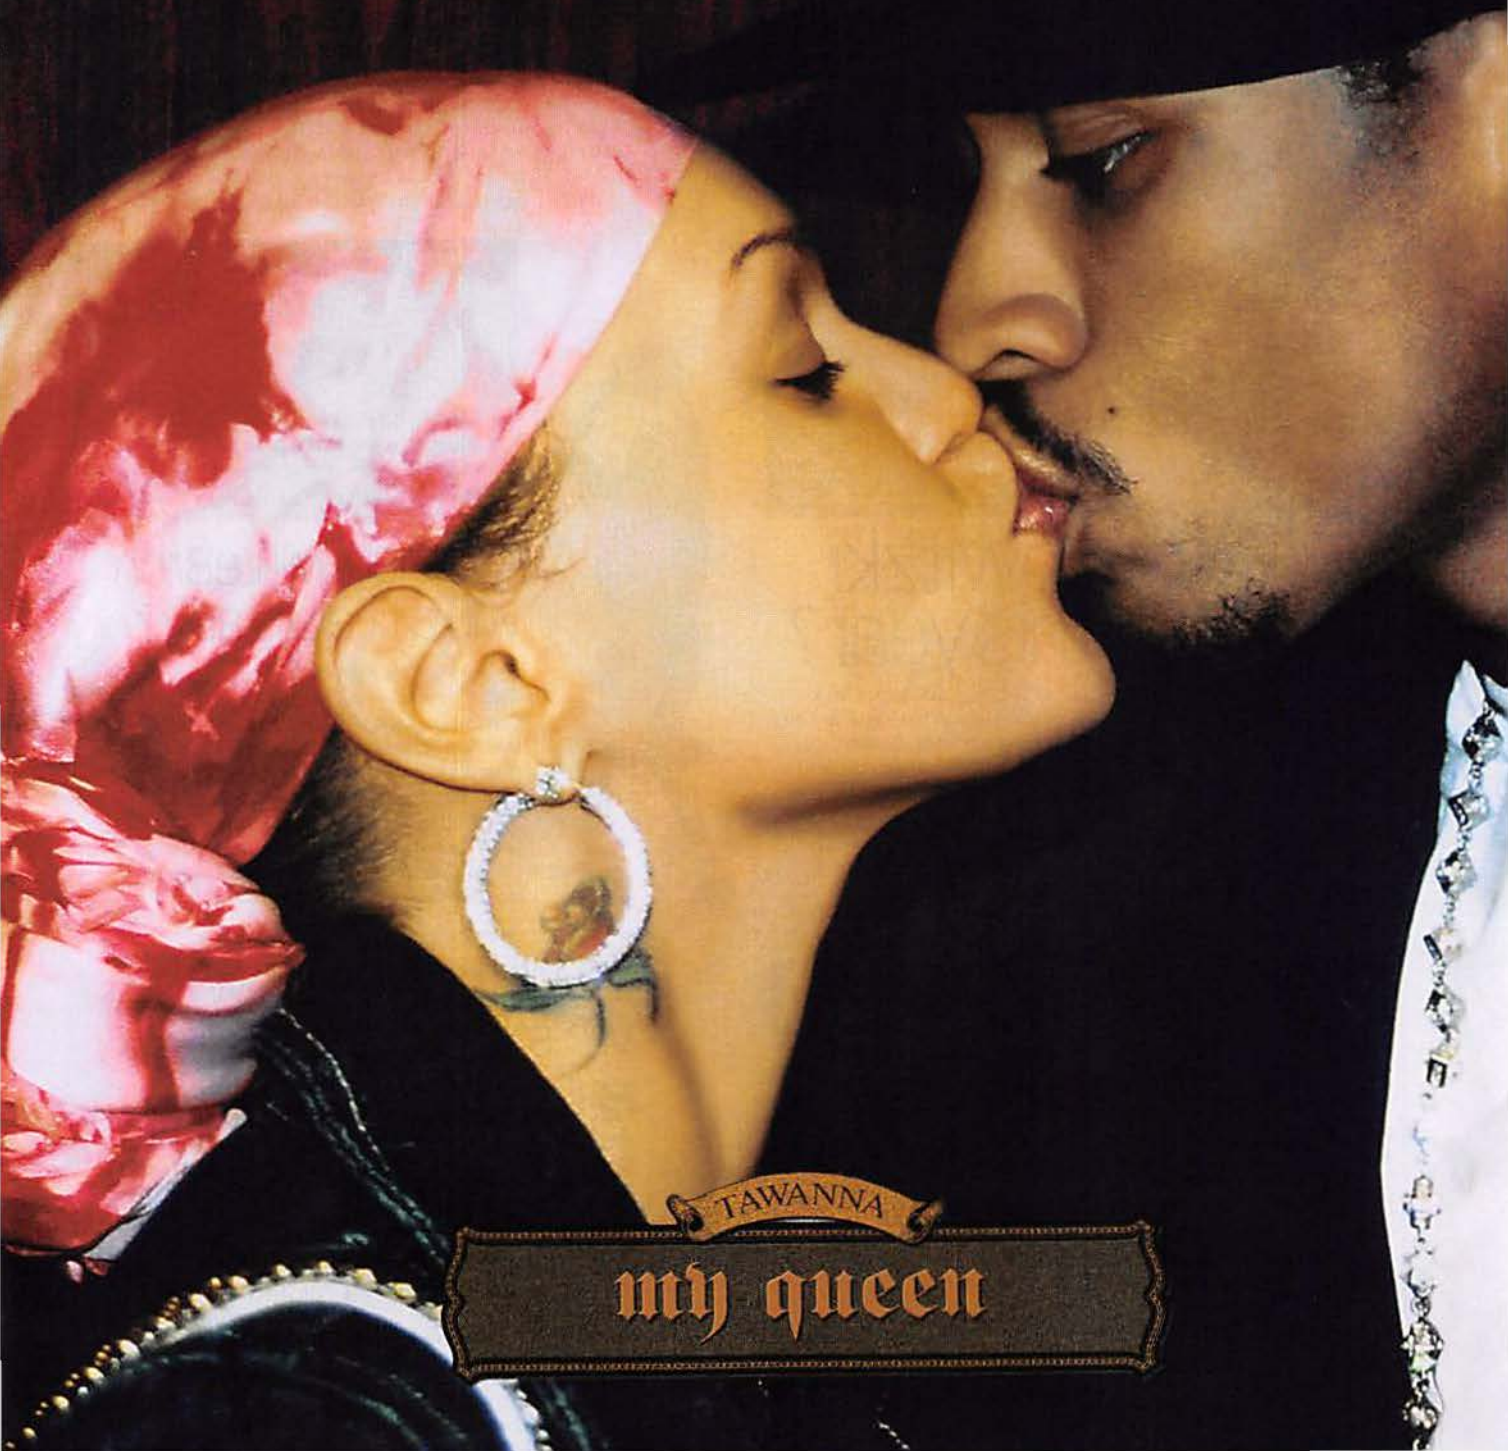

A The Bulls were already a good defensive team, holding opponents to a league low of 42.6 percent from the field. What they really need is consistent scoring. Instead, they pick up Ben Wallace, maybe the one player worse on offense than former Bull and current millstone around the necks of New Orleans Hornets fans, Tyson Chandler. Big Ben propels the Bulls into the conversation of teams with a chance to win it all by virtue of the fact that he is one of the few humans on the planet who can eat Shaq's lunch in the paint. He's a four-time All-Star. He has taken NBA Defensive Player of the Year honors for the past four seasons. But he only averaged 4.7 points per game in the playoffs last year. What does it all mean? A Chicago championship season is a sucker bet that only Michael Jordan would take.

CASH AND CARRY

$250,000

Amount the NBA fined Dallas Mavericks owner Mark Cuban for speaking his mind during the playoffs. Look for him to crest the $2 mil mark this season.

RBK

TAWANNA

my queen

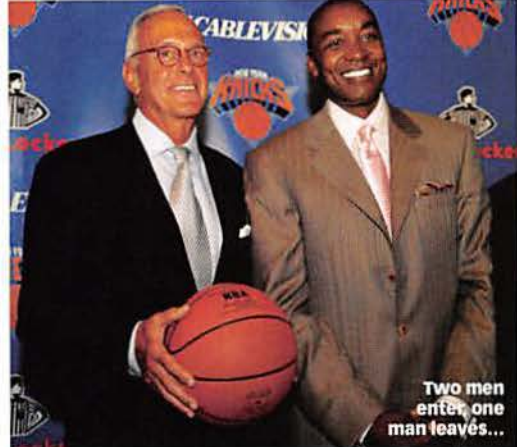

Will Dirk Nowitzki show up this year?

A In the early rounds of the playoffs, Super Dirk drove, drew fouls, and may even have gnawed on some players' forearms for some rebounds. But that cape he wore slipped south, firmly attaching around his waist like a skirt against Miami. While Wade drew foul after foul, Dirk cowered on the perimeter. That's where he'll stay most of the regular season—he's the guy's laid-back—but you bet your blue suede Chuck Taylors Super Dirk reappears for the playoffs.

Does Shaq have enough diesel left?

A When big men go down, they go down fast. We're looking at you, Ewing. If the Heat limit Shaq's playing time to 30 minutes a game over 60 games, he'll have plenty of gas for the postseason. If Shaq heads into April dinged up, the Heat will be quickly cooled.

Will 18 more wins save Isiah's job?

A Coming off a 23-59 season, the Knicks suck so bad they might sell more tickets as a reality show—Survivor: The Knicks Front Office. The real problem is owner James Dolan. After firing Larry Brown, Dolan installed GM Isiah Thomas as head coach and threatened, on national TV, to fire Thomas if the team did not show "significant" improvement. If that means a .500 season, Thomas needs only 18 more Ws over last year's record. All he has to do is let Starbury play his game and job-saving mediocrity is within reach!

MINUTE MAN

$1,581.30

How much the Toronto Raptors will pay number one draft pick Andrea Bargnani per minute if he averages 30 minutes a game this season.

When will LeBron win a title already?

A Forget the NBA crown—the Chosen One has yet to lead his team to a Central Division title. Granted, it's the Division of Death; all five teams made the playoffs last year. But the Cavs will take the Central not just because Chicago's poach of Ben Wallace weakened Detroit. The key is a full year of Larry Hughes slashing...toward the conference's top seed and the right to play Miami for a Finals berth.

Will the NBA blow the whistle on its officials?

A The refereeing in the NBA is so slanted in favor of stars that Ralph Nader wrote a letter to complain—four years ago! The situation hasn't gotten any better.

While Dwyane Wade and Steve Nash get calls every time a defender glares at them, the real foul is the NBA's transparent attempts to manufacture flashier games.

ON DECK

Don't Harsh the Melo

Carmelo Anthony's gonna elevate his game, and the city of Denver, to the next level.

Why should we be talking about Denver instead of Miami and Dallas?

We're one of the most exciting teams in the league. We get up and down, we dunk—we give the fans what they want to see.

What's the new hotness in Nuggetville?

We got a young kid named J.R. Smith. All he wants to do is get up and down the court and dunk and get the oohs and aahs.

What do the Nuggets need to get over the top?

We're still looking for that shooter, for somebody to come in and play that two-guard position.

What would you like to play the two and handle more.

First, I'm hearing about it. I'm a basketball player. If I have to play point, if I have to play shooting guard or center, I'll do it. I think people in the NBA know that I can handle the ball.

Preview the playoff scene...

It's gonna be crazy this year. Miami, they got the ring right now. Cleveland's making a run with LeBron. Chicago's building something. The East is interesting.

How do you stack up against Miami?

Shaq. Nobody has an answer for him. But we beat them twice last year—both times we played them.

You gonna step it up?

I've got something special in store. I've been in the gym since June just working on my shot, working on little things that could take me over the top. It's paying off.

What have you learned from watching the teams that go deep into the playoffs?

You can't take no plays off.

LeBron went for a three-year extension. Why did you max yours out at five?

The few, the proud, the effective.

Dexedrine

Army coffee might be strong, but many of today's soldiers take performance-enhancing amphetamines like Dexedrine anyway. After all, when you're stuck in the cockpit of a taxpayer-owned killing machine for hours on end, you've got to be alert.

Nootropics

To wage a modern war, the commanders of our armed forces have to stay focused. That's why scientists are developing nootropics, or "smart drugs," to keep military minds clear under fire—literally. We don't want anybody pushing the wrong button.

No-Go Pills

Quality sleep doesn't come easy when people are shooting at you, so to knock themselves out when it's finally time to hit the hay, some soldiers take powerful sedatives like Ambien or Restoril. Even Navy SEALs need their beauty rest, you know.

Q How do I talk my girlfriend into trying anal sex? Part of the problem is she thinks it's dirty; the other part is she thinks it won't feel good. How do I get past this stuff?

A Instead of trying to "talk her into" anal sex, suggest that you embark on a journey of anal exploration together as a romantic bonding experience—she might be more open to the idea if it's about love and mutual pleasure. Tell her that a woman's anus is filled with many more nerve endings than her vagina and that it can feel incredible when stimulated. Offer to give her full-body massages, and during the first session, rub between her anus and vagina. Next time, move on to the outside of her anus, and eventually, when she gives you permission, finger the inside. Be gentle, using only the tip of one lubricated finger and applying pressure back and forth or against the inner rim in small circles. If you accompany everything with clitoral stimulation to create a positive association, she'll hopefully get past her fears and be ready for anal sex. Have condoms and plenty of water-based lubricant on hand and take it slowly—otherwise you'll reverse all this progress in one quick thrust. Remember: A bird in the tush is worth two in the bush.

Q What's the most dangerous place in the world to have unprotected sex? Does one area really stand out?

A Sub-Saharan Africa has the highest prevalence of HIV-positive people, with Swaziland and Botswana topping off the dubious list. In Swaziland a full third of the adult population is HIV positive. The percentage of infected adults drops to a hair below 25 percent in Botswana, and in South Africa, Zimbabwe, and Namibia the number dips again to roughly 20 percent. By comparison, the adult HIV rate in the U.S. is about .6 percent. But the simple fact of the matter is that sex without a condom is dangerous wherever you go. Don't risk it anywhere: Always travel with protection.

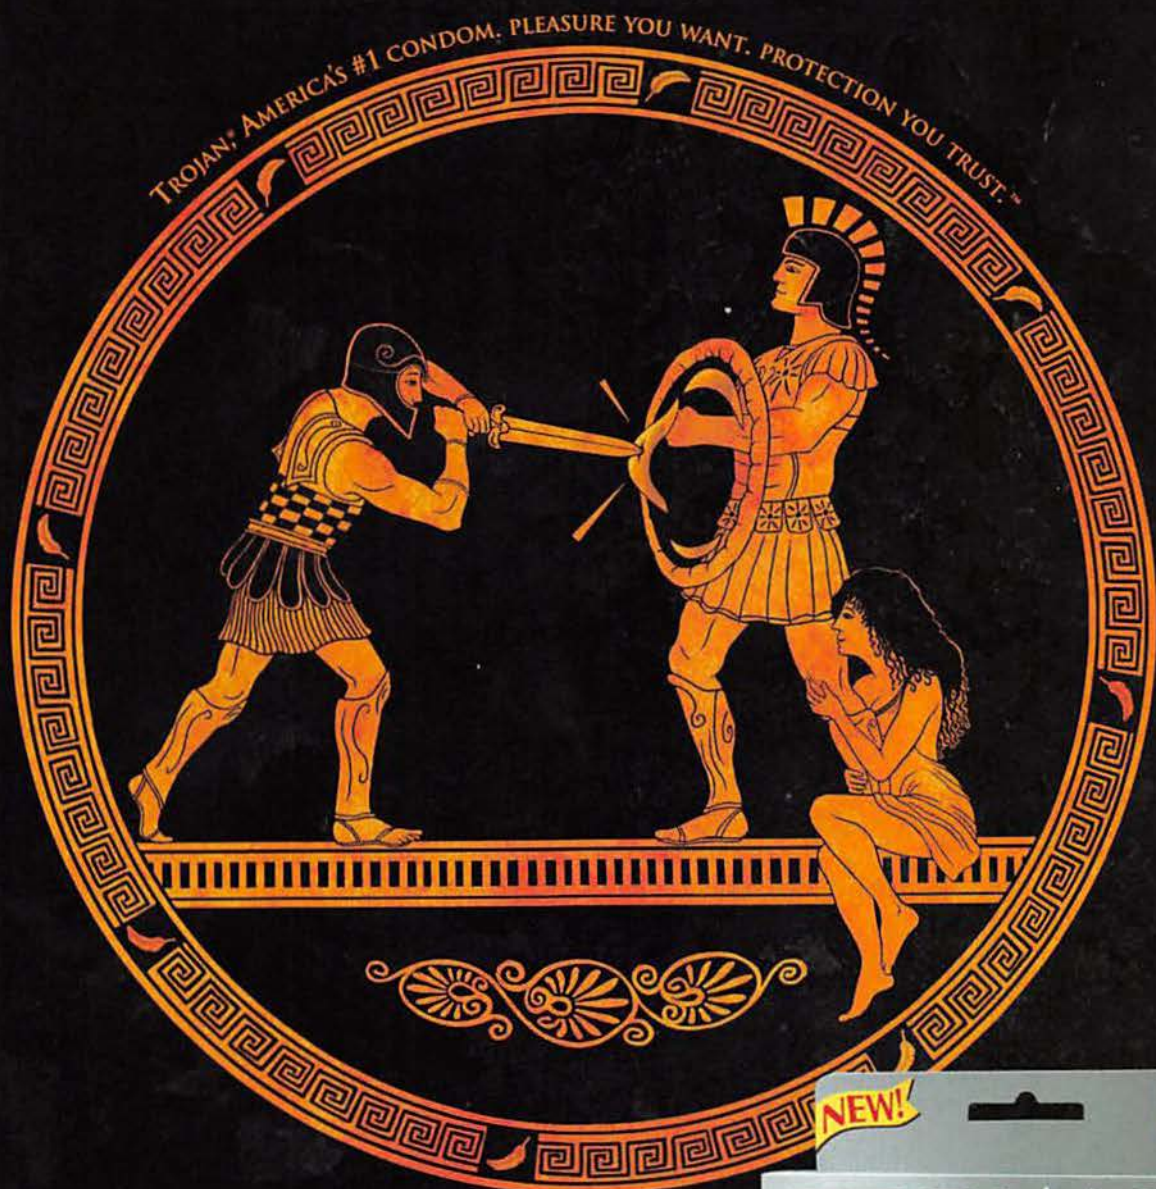

Q Is there a sex toy I can use with my girlfriend that won't threaten my libido?

Little Gem from Durex fits the bill perfectly. Small and discreet, it's nothing like those giant, vein-filled penises of the past generation of sex toys, and the vibrations will give her all the sensation she'll need for orgasm without introducing a more intimidating object into your bed. Get it for $55 at drugstore.com.

A When a woman desires a sex toy, it's usually because she's looking to experience a stronger orgasm. To achieve this as a couple, you'll want a toy that involves you both. A vibrator that is only used on her clitoris (not inserted into her vagina) can meet these two criteria, and the Play

The size of your paycheck has nothing to do with how much your boss likes you; it's how much he needs you. Befriend your boss' assistant and ferret out the boss' pet projects that have never gotten off the ground, and a possible future direction for the company. Then target the following coworkers: someone who is liked but not too talented (a potential scapegoat) and an industrious youngster who'll work hard but is not too clever.

2 December

While others are distracted by holiday parties, schedule a meeting with the boss. Keep it short. Volunteer to direct that favorite project of his that never quite took off. Explain how this could shift the company toward the future and some untapped opportunity you have amply researched. Once he agrees, get permission to bring along your chosen scapegoat—install him as your second in command—and the naive newbie.

3 January

Your office mates will notice you spearheading this new project. Tell them nothing or feed them lies. Use the private promise of a promotion to get your eager young beaver to work his tail off while publicly you take the credit. You seem to be doing the job of five men. This gets the attention of your boss, who will notice you've taken something off his plate, plus you're doing it fast. Accentuate this perception by giving him brief, incisive reports.

4 April

With a sad look, tell the boss of your outside job offer. You'd like to stay, but the money on the table is hard to turn down. Fears ripple through his mind: the project falling apart, the bad publicity, his boss wondering what went wrong. What will it take to keep you here? You shrug; he names a price. You say you'll think it over. He raises the offer. Accept. It is never wise to ask for too much; too much will be expected of you. Checkmate. Game over.

5 March

Feign an illness that'll keep you home several days. It's a critical time for the project, and without you there, chaos ensues. The scapegoat works doubly hard to prove himself, making a mess of things. The boss grows annoyed. Use your time away to go on job interviews. Seemingly aware of the problems your absence has caused, come back to the office "earlier than recommended." Cough a lot to emphasize the sacrifices you're making.

6 February

Without being overtly cruel, insinuate that you don't respect your scapegoat's ideas, and withhold key info from him. He's out of the loop without knowing it. Covertly leak the project to a trade magazine, creating some outside buzz. This will get the attention of the company's upper echelons and heighten the pressure on your boss: The project had better succeed or he'll look bad. Your name is also inextricably linked to its success.

elementandfriends.com

Recipe

1. Preheat your grill pan over medium heat, keeping the lid on as it warms up. If you don't have a panini grill, you can use a cast-iron skillet; a small heavy pan will work for your lid.
2. Lay the bread out on the counter and spread a thin layer of ricotta on each slice just as you would mustard or mayo. Each panino (this recipe serves two) requires two slices of bread, so, yep, you'll need four total.
3. Lay two slices of fontina cheese, half the coppa, and a slice of mortadella on one side of each panino. Arrange

Ingredients

- 4 slices rustic, thick-cut sandwich bread
- 1/4 cup fresh ricotta
- 4 slices fontina cheese (Val d'Aosta is best)
- 1/4 lb. coppa sausage, sliced paper thin
- 2 slices real mortadella
- 4 Tbs. chopped pickled cherry peppers
- 2 Tbs. sliced pickled jalapeño peppers
- 1 medium green tomato, sliced thin
- 4 Tbs. extra-virgin olive oil
- Dried oregano

the ingredients neatly, tossing your cherry peppers and jalapeños on top. Your third layer will consist of tomato slices (which you may want to cut in half). Top it off with some oregano and freshly ground pepper.

4. Close the panini with the other two slices of bread, brushing the outsides with olive oil. Place them on the griddle pan and cover. Cook for three to four minutes per side until the bread is crisp and golden brown (or until you can no longer stand the mouth-watering smell). Serve to your bella donna of choice.

- 2 Midrange Magic Sweet melting cheese demands fruitiness. I like the dulcet tones of a wine from Puglia called Primitivo. At $17 the 2001 Majara costs a tad more than the Torre Quarto, but it's worth the extra bills.
- 3 Heavy Hitter Head west to Basilicata for a magnificent Aglianico by Fucci. The 2003 is $55, which, if you're not all about vino, might be a lofty price point. For simpler palates, an ice-cold Pilsner Urquell will temper those peppers just as well.

Carve a Turkey

A true kitchen samurai never lets anyone else handle his katana!

1 Lie in Wait

According to Marshall Shafkowitz, executive chef at the Cooking and Hospitality Institute of Chicago, you should wait 30 minutes before you start cutting. "If you carve the bird the second it comes out of the oven, it'll start to bleed and lose its moisture." We call it turkey menopause, but that's not a technical term.

3 Get the Legs Up

Grab the tip of a drumstick and raise it straight up, feeling for the center of the joint with a chef knife. If you hit something hard and dense, that's bone. Cartilage, on the other hand, should feel like "a stale gummy bear." Your knife will slide right through, leaving you with a baton of tender dark meat.

2 Be a Breast Man

Using a sharp carving knife (never use a serrated blade), make your first incision near the neck, just to one side of the breastbone. Slice down the body with the blade riding the bone. Now, on the same side make a horizontal cut along the ribs, until the two incisions meet. Lift the breast and slice.

4 Grip and Rip

The skin and gristle around the wing make it harder to cut. So snap that joint with your hands, then slice through the cartilage and remaining fatty bits connecting it to the body. Now give thanks to the pilgrims, serve the bird, and pretend like you give a damn about the Kansas City game.

HE HAS GENITAL HERPES.

SHE DOESN'T.

AND HE TAKES ONCE-DAILY VALTREX TO HELP KEEP IT THAT WAY.

WHAT YOU MAY NOT KNOW ABOUT GENITAL HERPES

You might be surprised to learn you may pass genital herpes on to your partner at any time, even if you don't get that many outbreaks. Studies show that the virus can be active on the surface of your skin without showing any signs or symptoms. In fact, one study found that up to 70% of people who had genital herpes got it from their partner when they had no signs or symptoms of an outbreak.

REDUCE THE RISK OF SPREADING GENITAL HERPES

Prescription VALTREX is the only medication proven to reduce the risk of spreading genital herpes. Safer sex practices should be used with daily therapy. To reduce the risk of spreading genital herpes:

- Do not have sexual contact when you get an outbreak or think you are about to get an outbreak.
- Always use a condom when you have sex.
- Take VALTREX Caplets every day as prescribed.

It is not known if VALTREX reduces the risk of spreading genital herpes in same sex couples.

IMPORTANT SAFETY INFORMATION

There's no cure for herpes. Even with treatment, it's possible to spread herpes. VALTREX is for adults with healthy immune systems. To avoid a potentially serious complication, tell your doctor if your immune system isn't normal because of bone marrow or kidney transplant or advanced HIV disease. Common side effects include headache, nausea, stomach pain, cold, and sore throat.

PATIENT INFORMATION
VALTREX® (Val-trex)
 (valacyclovir hydrochloride) Caplets

Read the Patient Information that comes with VALTREX before you start using it and each time you get a refill. There may be new information. This information does not take the place of talking to your healthcare provider about your medical condition or treatment. Ask your healthcare provider or pharmacist if you have questions.

What is VALTREX?

VALTREX is a prescription antiviral medicine. VALTREX lowers the ability of herpes viruses to multiply in your body.

VALTREX is used:

- to treat cold sores (also called fever blisters or herpes labialis) in adults
- to treat shingles (also called herpes zoster) in adults
- to treat or control genital herpes outbreaks in adults with normal immune systems
- to control genital herpes outbreaks in adults infected with the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) with CD4 cell count greater than 100 cells/mm³
- with safer sex practices to lower the chances of spreading genital herpes to others. Even with safer sex practices, it is still possible to spread genital herpes.

VALTREX used daily with the following safer sex practices can lower the chances of passing genital herpes to your partner.

- Do not have sexual contact with your partner when you have any symptom or outbreak of genital herpes.
- Use a condom made of latex or polyurethane whenever you have sexual contact.

VALTREX does not cure herpes infections (cold sores, shingles, or genital herpes).

VALTREX has not been studied in children who have not reached puberty.

What are cold sores, shingles, and genital herpes?

Cold sores are caused by a herpes virus that may be spread by kissing or other physical contact with the infected area of the skin. They are small, painful ulcers that you get in or around your mouth. It is not known if VALTREX can stop the spread of cold sores to others.

Shingles is caused by the same herpes virus that causes chickenpox. It causes small, painful blisters that happen on a certain area of your skin. Shingles occurs in people who have already had chickenpox. Shingles can be spread to people who have not had chickenpox or the chickenpox vaccine by contact with the infected areas of the skin. It is not known if VALTREX can stop the spread of shingles to others.

Genital herpes is a sexually transmitted disease. It causes small, painful blisters on your genital area. You can spread genital herpes to others, even when you have no symptoms. If you are sexually active, you can still pass herpes to your partner, even if you are taking VALTREX. VALTREX, taken every day as prescribed and used with the following safer sex practices, can lower the chances of passing genital herpes to your partner.

- Do not have sexual contact with your partner when you have any symptom or outbreak of genital herpes.
- Use a condom made of latex or polyurethane whenever you have sexual contact.

Ask your healthcare provider for more information about safer sex practices.

Who should not take VALTREX?

Do not take VALTREX if you are allergic to any of its ingredients or to acyclovir. The active ingredient is valacyclovir. See the end of this leaflet for a complete list of ingredients in VALTREX.

Before taking VALTREX, tell your healthcare provider:

About all your medical conditions, including:

- if you have had a bone marrow transplant or kidney transplant, or if you have advanced HIV disease or "AIDS": Patients with these conditions may have a higher chance of getting a blood disorder called thrombotic thrombocytopenic purpura/hemolytic uremic syndrome (TTP/HUS). TTP/HUS can result in death.
- if you have kidney problems. Patients with kidney problems may have a higher chance of getting side effects or more kidney problems with VALTREX. Your healthcare provider may give you a lower dose of VALTREX.
- if you are 65 years of age or older. Elderly patients have a higher chance of certain side effects. Also, elderly patients are more likely to have kidney problems. Your healthcare provider may give you a lower dose of VALTREX.
- if you are pregnant or planning to become pregnant. Talk with your healthcare provider about the risks and benefits of taking prescription drugs (including VALTREX) during pregnancy.
- if you are breastfeeding. VALTREX may pass into your milk and it may harm your baby. Talk with your healthcare provider about the best way to feed your baby if you are taking VALTREX.
- about all the medicines you take, including prescription and non-prescription medicines, vitamins, and herbal supplements. VALTREX may affect other medicines, and other medicines may affect VALTREX. This may happen if you have certain medical conditions such as kidney problems.

It is a good idea to keep a complete list of all the medicines you take. Show this list to your healthcare provider and pharmacist any time you get a new medicine.

How should I take VALTREX?

Take VALTREX exactly as prescribed by your healthcare provider. Your dose of VALTREX and length of treatment will depend on the type of herpes infection that you have and any other medical problems that you have.

- Do not stop VALTREX or change your treatment without talking to your healthcare provider.
- VALTREX can be taken with or without food.
- If you are taking VALTREX to treat cold sores, shingles, or genital herpes, you should start treatment as soon as possible after your symptoms start. VALTREX may not help you if you start treatment too late.
- If you miss a dose of VALTREX, take it as soon as you remember and then take your next dose at its regular time. However, if it is almost time for your next dose, do not take the missed dose. Wait and take the next dose at the regular time.
- Do not take more than the prescribed number of VALTREX Caplets each day. Call your healthcare provider right away if you take too much VALTREX.

What are the possible side effects of VALTREX?

Kidney failure and nervous system problems are not common, but can be serious in some patients taking VALTREX. Nervous system problems include aggressive behavior, unsteady movement, shaky movements, confusion, speech problems, hallucinations (seeing or hearing things that are really not there), seizures, and coma. Kidney failure and nervous system problems have happened in patients who already have kidney disease and in elderly patients whose kidneys do not work well due to age. Always tell your healthcare provider if you have kidney problems before taking VALTREX. Call your doctor right away if you get a nervous system problem while you are taking VALTREX.

Common side effects of VALTREX include headache, nausea, stomach pain, vomiting, and dizziness. Side effects in HIV-infected adults include headache, tiredness, and rash. These side effects are usually mild and usually do not cause patients to stop taking VALTREX.

Other less common side effects include painful periods in women, joint pain, depression, low blood cell counts, and changes in tests that measure how well the liver and kidneys work.

Talk to your healthcare provider if you develop any side effects that concern you.

These are not all the side effects of VALTREX. For more information ask your healthcare provider or pharmacist.

How should I store VALTREX?

- Store VALTREX at room temperature, 59° to 77°F (15° to 25°C).
- Keep VALTREX in a tightly closed container.
- Do not keep medicine that is out of date or that you no longer need.
- Keep VALTREX and all medicines out of the reach of children.

General information about VALTREX

Medicines are sometimes prescribed for conditions that are not mentioned in patient information leaflets. Do not use VALTREX for a condition for which it was not prescribed. Do not give VALTREX to other people, even if they have the same symptoms you have. It may harm them.

This leaflet summarizes the most important information about VALTREX. If you would like more information, talk with your healthcare provider. You can ask your healthcare provider or pharmacist for information about VALTREX that is written for health professionals. More information is available at www.VALTREX.com.

Standing Omni Barbell Curl With Drop Set

Stand and hold the barbell with a wide grip (hands just outside your shoulders) and do six controlled reps.

Remove 10 to 15 percent of the weight, switch to a close grip (hands just inside your shoulders), and do four reps.

Remove 10 to 15 percent more weight, switch to a normal grip, and do four reps. Rest after three sets.

Pause E-Z Bar Reverse Curl on a Preacher Bench

Sit on the preacher bench and hold an E-Z curl barbell tightly with a reverse (overhand) grip.

Lift the bar two to four inches, pause for two seconds, and then lift it the rest of the way up.

Maximize the negative by taking four whole seconds to lower the weight. Do three sets of six to eight reps.

Incline Dumbbell Zottman Curl

Grab two dumbbells and, sitting on a bench inclined 35 to 40 degrees, curl them up toward your chest.

At the top of the motion, flip the dumbbells so your palms are facedown. (This switches the stress to your forearms.)

Control your tempo by taking five seconds to lower the weight. Rest after three to four sets of six to eight reps.

By Sloane Crosley

How does it feel to be a part of the whole young, hot Hollywood scene?

Danneel: Honestly, it feels like a nine-to-five job.

Hilarie: It's nice, though, because we film our show in a really small, Southern town—Wilmington, North Carolina.

Sophia: We have normal lives. We're not getting big egos out here like those people who are constantly chauffeured around and going to parties every night. A lot of the people in this business seem to think they're entitled to extra-special treatment.

Hilarie: Filming across the country. I often feel like we're underdogs—which I like. I've always rooted for underdogs. Hopefully, our work on camera speaks for itself, because that's really all you ever see. There's no Page Six in Wilmington!

There are, like, two streets with things to do in Wilmington, though. What do you do for fun?

Hilarie: It depends. There are clubs where the sorority girls go—we don't go to those places. We go to rock bars like the Soapbox. That's our spot.

Sophia: Usually, we just spend nights at home or throw parties for each other.

Danneel: And sing rock'n'roll karaoke together!

Hilarie: It's true, dude! There's nothing like a little Journey at two o'clock in the morning.

Sophia: We've done some serious Notorious B.I.G. songs, which is really amusing—100 people staring at the geekiest little white girls in the bar, screaming Biggie at the top of their lungs.

Hilarie: We're dorks.

Danneel: I don't try to perform and be like Paris Hilton, showing up at some party and singing her new song.

You see her on Today?

Danneel: She was actually really good. [pause] I'm totally lying. She sucked. Just kidding!

Don't you feel like you're missing out on all those swanky gift bags?

Sophia: Sadly, we're not around when they're given out, but I wouldn't say we missed out. It's not like we're entitled to anything just because we're actors. I think when you develop a sense of entitlement, you're in trouble.

Hilarie: I think we should definitely get more free shit. I love presents! Last year at the Teen Choice Awards, I got one of those Orange County Choppers bicycles, like, for little kids. I gave it to my cousin for Christmas. We'll never use that stuff, but it's fun to get things that our relatives think are cool.

Sophia: I still get excited. You think, Really? I can have it? And sometimes people want to give more, and it's like, Two?

Who makes you starstruck?

Hilarie: I'm obsessed with that show Miami Ink. I was sitting in this bar in Miami, and the whole cast walked in with all these buxom women, and I yelled out, "Oh, my God!" They turned around, and I quickly realized what a tool I was.

Sophia: I was out last night, and almost lost it because I looked to my left and there's Hugh Laurie. I love House. I mean, I love it.

Danneel: Oh, like Law & Order: SVU? Oh. My. God.

Sophia: Oh! That's my all-time favorite. I met the cast last year. When Richard Belzer shook my hand and I looked him in the eye, I was having heart palpitations. I said, "I'm sorry, I can't breathe. I'll be fine in a second." And he said, "Over us? Really?" I have every episode of every season TiVo'd. I freaked out.

You must encounter your fair share of starstruck fans, though. What's the creepiest interaction you've had?

Hilarie: Can I say this, or are you going to get mad?

Sophia: Oh, go ahead.

Hilarie: We were doing this mall tour for our show—it's great because we finally got to meet our fans face-to-face—and this guy came up to Sophia and me with letters that said, "Since I can't marry you, I'd like to adopt you."

Sophia: It was so creepy. He told us his entire life story. He was 62 years old.

Hilarie: But it was sweet! Well, it was creepy and sweet at the same time.

Sophia: It was well-intentioned, but at the same time, it's like, because we can't be in a relationship, you want to be my dad? That's weird. [+]

What's the worst paparazzi run-in you've ever had?

Hilarie: I haven't really had one. I've become kind of desensitized, because for the longest time I was that press, working at MTV, chasing actors and stuff. I understand that's their job. But I also feel like Hollywood has lost some of its mystery, and that's too bad.

What do you mean by that?

Sophia: Mystery makes movie stars! If you see someone on the cover of the weeklies all the time, why would you want to pay to see them in a movie?

Hilarie: Yeah, Hollywood doesn't focus on your work. It's like giving the Teacher of the Year Award to the hot third-grade teacher. It's not about whether she can teach long division—it's if she's dating the football coach.

What advice do you have for up-and-coming stars?

Sophia: Remember—parading around this town half-naked and getting wasted is only excusable when you're young enough not to know better. It's not something you can make a career out of.

Danneel: It stops being cute when you're 35. Also, sometimes you lose out to hype. I'll audition against someone, and I know they're gonna get the part just because they went to the right parties.

Hilarie: See, I know what hype is. When I worked at MTV, during our meeting for TRL, the producers would say, "Look, we know O-Town sucks, but sell them today." Then, a year later, those guys are begging to be on the show, and we're like, "Sorry. You're not cool anymore." People have become products.

Say you weren't acting. What would you be doing?

Sophia: Writing. I went to school for journalism.

Danneel: I studied beat poetry.

Hilarie: You know, Danneel here is our only college grad.

You guys legitimately seem to like each other. That's not very Hollywood.

Hilarie: You know, we could totally be fucking with you, and this could all be bullshit.

Sophia: We might be that good. We are actors, after all.

1 Kristen Cavallari

After ditching her status as a big fish in a small pond, Laguna Beach's cutest brat has taken Hollywood by storm. She dated a rebounding and superhorny Nick Lachey and is a regular at Hyde and Privilege. But this sassy California girl with a taste for fame wants to be more than tabloid fodder—judge for yourself and catch her 2007 film debut, Fingerprints.

2 Alexis Dziena

This puffy-lipped sexpot caught our eye and made us feel dirty in a good way when she paraded around in the buff in Broken Flowers. Next up she keeps her clothes on—dammit!—opposite Russell Crowe in the thriller Tenderness. For the record, we'd gladly take a phone to the head from His Aussieness for a little down-under with Alexis.

3 Malin Akerman

This Swedish-born blonde—who also fronts the rock band Ozono—had to turn down a cushy role on Lost because her movie dance card was so full. We love her for making threesomes look even more awesome on Entourage than porn led us to believe. Here's to hoping for a full-blown orgy in her next film, The Visiting.

4 Caroline D'Amore

A model and actress, Caroline first showed up on the scene as part of Paris Hilton's posse. When she's not at the heiress' side at the hottest clubs or strutting the runway in swimsuits that would make Pamela Anderson blush, she's behind the decks as a DJ. Well, that'll be the case until Paris gets jealous and has her blacklisted. (We're guessing in two months.)

5 Katie Cassidy

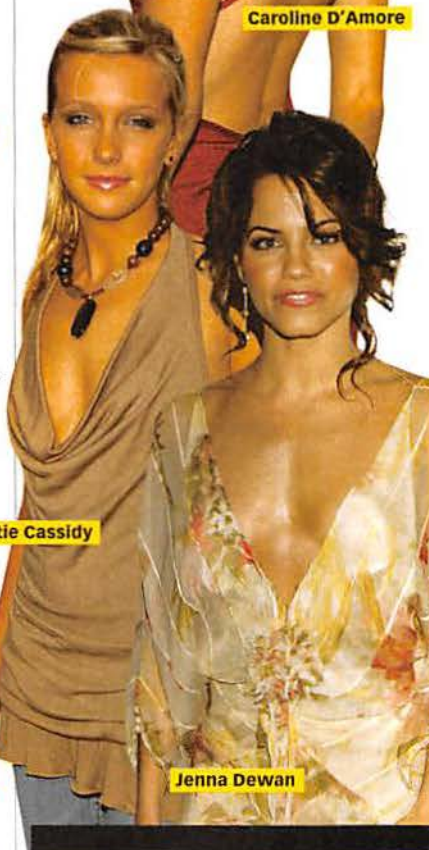

Her papa, David "Partridge Family" Cassidy, should be so proud. His little girl is all grown up! Having landed a role in the movie remake of Dallas, 19-year-old Katie has three other films in the pipeline for 2007. Sadly, this member of the Hollywood Royal Family already has her prince—she's dating some dweeb, er, Jesse McCartney.

This former backup dancer is best known as Justin Timberlake's rebound post-Britney, but in 2006 she managed to parlay her 15 minutes into big roles in two dance-themed movies, Step Up and Take the Lead. Her next film, The Grudge 2, is one you won't need to see disguised as a girl.

This exotic beauty made parkas sexy in the heartwarming sled dog film Eight Below and is set to titillate geek fantasies as StarFire in Pathfinder—but we always love a girl whose name is made up of a pre-schooler's vocabulary.

8 Olivia Wilde

This blonde beauty's spit-swapping scene with Mischa Barton was the best 10 seconds in The OC's history. Luckily, the year ahead promises two new films from our suspiciously realistic pseudo-lipstick lesbian: Turistas and Running With Scissors.

9 Michelle Trachtenberg

Buffy the Vampire Slayer was porn for the D&D crowd, but it gave the world Michelle Trachtenberg. She's ditched the nerd patrol for Beautiful Ohio, but her turn in the sorority slasher flick Black Christmas is what's gonna stuff our stocking.

Along with blowing away critics in the 2005 teenage noir flick Brick, doe-eyed 25-year-old Cali-girl Meagan rolled with rapper the Game in Waist Deep and danced in a 50 Cent video. Check her out next in the upcoming Stomp the Yard.

Now that Angelina Jolie's lost her edge, Shannyn Sossamon seems poised to take her place as the star most likely to take us to bed then kill us afterward. Watch her get her goth on this Christmas in the chick flick The Holiday with Cameron Diaz.

12 Rachel Nichols

It's no easy feat being hot next to Jennifer Garner, but Rachel turned up the heat with a turn on Alias. Next up she tries to steal the spotlight from Samuel L. Jackson in the boxing drama Resurrecting the Champ. Yeah, we smell a knockout.

We admire the 30 Seconds to Mars rocker for his cool movies and onstage eyeliner and because he can rebound from a looker like Cameron Diaz... with 20-year-olds Ashley Olsen, Scarlett Johansson, and Lindsay Lohan.

3 Adam Levine

The Maroon 5 crooner cashed in on the notion that if you sing like your testicles never descended you're guaranteed hot women. Levine allegedly broke himself off a taste of Jessica Simpson—while she was married to Nick Lachey.

4 Stavros Niarchos

It's Sexytime!

After traveling thousands of miles making his new movie, Kazakh reporter Borat shares his views on the great U.S. and A.

By John DeVore

Your documentary is subtitled Cultural Learnings of America for Make Benefit Glorious Nation of Kazakhstan. What cultural learnings of America made benefits to Kazakhstan?

Much have improve about Kazakhstan since I return from U.S. and A. For examples, we now has democracy the same as U.S. and A.—only difference is, instead of man with most votes winning, the winner is man who can suspend heaviest weight from his testes satchel. Our current leader, Premier Nazarbayev, hold record for suspend a car battery for 8.2 seconds! We also learn from your excellent TV and now have game shows very much like your Jeopardys. Our most popular have name Gypsy Bingo. We put numbers on back of 20 gypsies. Contestant have to bet on which number will reach other side of minefield. Kazakhstan is also much more multiculturals, and now has a thrivings community of black peoples. The makeup they wears is so good they looks almost identical to genuine African peoples.

America's cracking down on security. Did you have any trouble getting in?

I initial had my applicate for U.S. visa reject because of a sex crime misunderstanding, but it was clear up once I made clear that the horse was over seven.

In your travels, were you ever afraid for your life at a security checkpoint?

Yes, one times in Dallas. I was stop by your secret police with guns. They were about to make erotic search on me until I informed them that previous night I had eaten 18 delicious Cinnabons, making my stomach infect, with result my anoos was hang open like mouth of tired dog.

Did you enjoy our fast food?

I like very much U.S. fast-food chain named "Garbage." They serve their food from convenient waist-high containers locate on most American streets. They has outlets all across country, the menu constant change, and the food is free! My second favorite is the one run by a red-headed clown who resemble Gogol, the famous Kazakh sex criminal. It very convenient, particular because the playpen have glass windows, allowing you to take beautiful photograph of the young childrens inside.

In the documentary, you propose to Pamela Anderson. How does she compare to your sister?

Pamela is much more pretties. She have teeth only on inside of her mouth, she have more hair on her head than her chest, and she is not strong enough to punch a horse to sleep.

In your opinion, who is the greatest American?

Greatest American is obvious the fearless anti-Jew warrior Mel Gibson. I would like say that I agree with Melvin's statement that Jews started all the wars. We in Kazakhstan have proof that they also caused Hurricane Katrina and killed off all the dinosaurs.

How do you think President Bush would do running Kazakhstan?

If Mighty Warlord Bush would enter the next presidential election in 2045, he would lose. To be leader of my nation a man must have a penis size at least equivalent of a tube of Pringles. I cannot tell if Bush have this dimensions because in the photograph I see on Internet of him making sexy-time, he was penetrate with Osama bin Laden to the junction with his testes. Also, I am unsure whether his wife would be able to make perform the duties of Kazakh First Lady—opening schools, smiling in photographs, and giving hand relief to visiting dignitaries.

Critics say Kazakhstan is a racist backwater. Any special words for those critics?

Kazakhstan now as modern as any other nation, especially since the Tulyakiev Reforms of 2003, which mean women can now travel on inside of bus, homosexuals no longer have to wear blue hats, and age of consent have been raised to 14-year-old. I would like invite American peoples to come visit Kazakhstan and see for themselves. I recommend very much the Astana Funworld Family Resort. It have something for everyones—for wives there are luxury cages, for husbands there is unlimited buffet of regularly cleaned Uzbeki prostitutes, and for children there is enclosure in which they can hunt wild boar and gypsies.

Polls say people don't like America all that much either. How can we improve our standing abroad?

If poll do not provide you with positive results, then you must take actions. One time our premier commission a poll of Kazakh women to see how many like new hairstyle of his pubis—it come back as seven percent. What did he do? He did not change his pubis, he changed the opinion of the people who did not like his pubis.

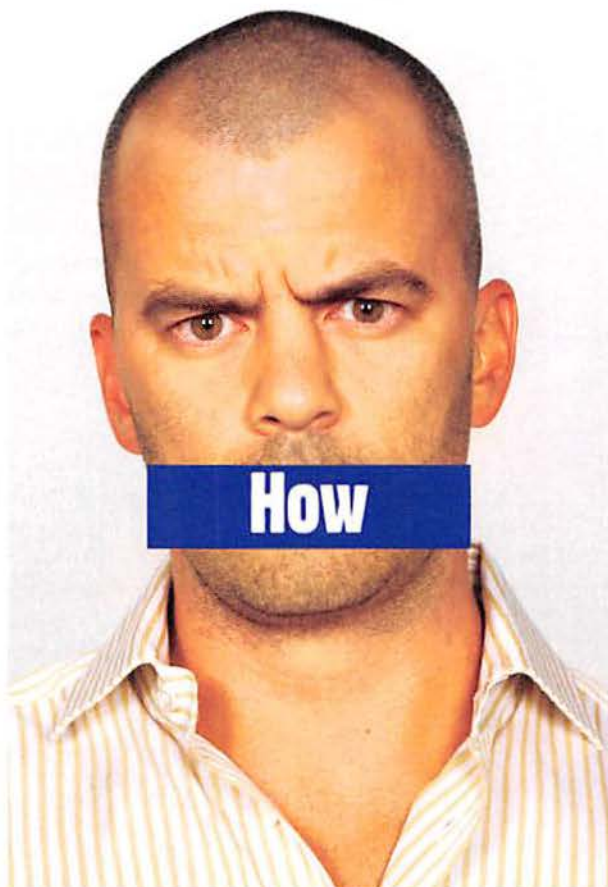

Where did you find that neon yellow man-thong?

I find this swim clothes in Kazakhstan's new shopping mall, Astana Shop City. It have two stores on separate levels, connected by Central Asia's first moving electrical staircase! Which did not grind up those two school childrens... M

SHAKING FINGER

What it means: "I don't really want to fight."

"One thing we teach police officers and security is that if someone's just shaking their finger at you, you get them in a headlock and throw the cuffs on them. However, be wary if they seem to be fussing with a pocket while speaking to you threateningly. There's a good chance they're nervously stroking a weapon."

POINTING FINGER

What it means: "Grab your nuts. It's fucking on!"

"When a person points, it's like a knife. They stab the finger toward you, and they might even make contact with your skin. In this case you've got to step back or step in, because there's a good chance they're about to throw an overhand right. A right-hand overarm blow is hard-wired into the brains of male primates."

POINTING FOOT

What it means: "Come over here and talk to me."

"This applies to men and women. When we're standing, we shift our weight to one side and point our lead foot at the most interesting person in the immediate vicinity. If you're standing in a group, just have a look at their feet—that shows you where their interest lies. Their feet point where they'd like to go."

PLAYING WITH HER HAIR

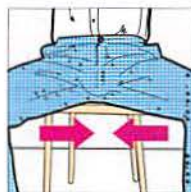

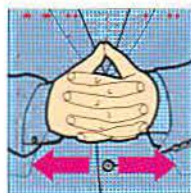

What it means: "Do you want to touch my luxurious mane?"

"During a conversation in a mixed group, you'll often notice that some women have the habit of going for their own hair. She'll flick the hair and twirl it around her finger. What her brain is saying is, 'Yeah, look at my hair. If you play your cards right, you might be able to do this. You could stroke my hair, too.'"

JOB INTERVIEW TACTICS

Getting the Gig

Allan Pease shows you how to at least act like you know what you're doing.

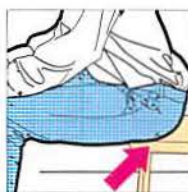

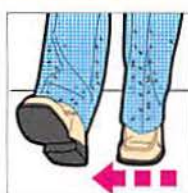

1. DON'T hold your own hand.

"Clasping your hands or lacing your fingers is a sign of insecurity. When you were a kid, your mother held your hand in a tense situation. As an adult, in a tense situation you reenact that same thing by holding your own hand."

2. DON'T display the jewels.

"Rather than fight, male monkeys will sit around with their legs apart—the boy with the biggest wins. If you spread your legs, you're saying, 'Isn't this a big one?' A perceptive interviewer will think you're being an ass."

3. DO make an entrance.

"Your entry tells others how you expect to be treated. Walk in without hesitation, don't linger, and maintain the same speed. People who lack confidence change gears and perform a small shuffle as they enter."

4. DO sit attentively on the edge of your seat. "If you, as a job candidate, feel some sort of contempt for your potential boss, you might assume dominance positions. Resist the urge to sit back in your seat and put both hands behind your head."

PELVIC TILT

What it means: "I'm thirsty. Buy me a drink."

"Women use what's called a pelvic tilt. When standing they bend their front knee so it tilts their pelvis. Men can't do this because we're not built the same way, but the tilt highlights the ratio between her hips and waist. A woman who has a waist 70 percent the size of her hips gets the most looks from men."

DISPLAYING THE WRIST

What it means: "The coach on third is waving you home."

"Women make a point of exposing the underside of the wrist to you as you talk. It's a submission signal. Tilting the head is also a submission signal, because it exposes the neck. If they want to get a guy's attention, women will show signs that they could be dominated, which in turn gets men very interested."

TOOTHLESS SMILE

What it means: "We both know you're a douchebag."

"Most women won't tell you to drop dead. Instead they try to pretend they like you and hope you'll go away. You'll see a tight-lipped smile, and her eyes will slightly narrow, which mimics the same behavior predators display before they kill. Squinting helps them get a clear focus on their prey."

TELLTALE HEAD SHAKE

What it means: "Contrary to what's coming out of my mouth, I did nail your sister."

"You've got to keep a sharp eye out for contradicting signals. If you truly believe what you're saying, your head starts to nod in the affirmative as you're saying it. If you don't believe something and have a negative emotion about it, your head starts to shake from side to side."

2005 WSOP champ Joe Hachem on how to read the enemy.

1. Check the chips

Look for patterns of behavior; when someone breaks a pattern, he's usually bluffing. If a player who is meticulous in chip arrangement and cutting his chips suddenly splashes the pot? That usually means he's bluffing.

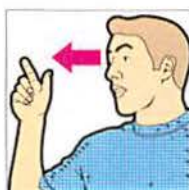

2. Stone-faced killer

When people remain steadfast and calm as you stare them down during the middle of a hand, it usually means they've got the goods. If you're bluffing, it might be a good time to throw your cards in the muck.

3. Chatterbox

The more an opponent talks, the less he has, unless he's a really good player. But if he is usually quiet and now he won't shut up, that's the nerves talking. It's time for you to push the action. He's got nothing.

4. Out to lunch

If your opponent tries to act nonchalant during a hand by staring into space or ordering a drink from the waitress and then fires off a massive bet or raise when it's his turn to call, he's got the nuts.

Angel^{of} Death

Pat Dollard traded a life of luxury as a Hollywood agent for that of a war journalist dodging bullets and shrapnel alongside the Marines in Iraq. He did it so you could see the truth...his version of the truth.

Eventually, I learned the joys of killing. But I'm skipping ahead of myself. I landed for my first stint in Iraq in November 2004 armed with a video camera instead of a weapon. I had obtained a rare embed from the United States Marines Corps for a nonjournalist private citizen to make my documentary, Young Americans. I had some help pulling strings—the Corps doesn't like journalistically unaccredited Hollywood talent agents having unfettered access on the front lines of the war on terror. This story will seem a little sketchy and broad-stroked—because I'm stoned and I'm a liar. The former actually isn't true. But while I can't give away all the details of my film, I am, however, going to take you into parts of Iraq you hear about but won't see on prime time. CNN correspondents tend to send dispatches via satellite videophone from the relative comfort of fortified bases, the smoke from recent explosions pluming in the background. Me? I took my camera and went out on patrol with the men of the U.S. Marines. I was in the explosions.

First Stop: The Triangle of Death

I thought I was going to the place I knew from the news, a place where combat meant an occasional roadside bomb (a.k.a. an IED) exploding. The notion of a 24/7 engagement never entered my mind. That misconception ended the first night I arrived in Camp Kalsu, 25 miles south of Baghdad, outside Iskandariyah, in an area commonly referred to as the Triangle of Death—and my new home for the next three months. I was shown my hootch (tent) and given directions to a jury-rigged phone and Internet tent where everyone was allowed 20 minutes a session. "Careful, though," said public affairs chief Staff Sgt. Demetrio Espinosa. "That phone tent was hit by a mortar last night, and we had 18 casualties." When I got there the tent was a standing imitation of a hunk of Swiss cheese. On the way back to my hootch, I saw several others blown to shit. Goodnight, Iraq, nice to meet you.

In my former life I was Oscar-winning director Steven Soderbergh's agent and manager. I co-owned a prosperous talent management firm, Relativity Management, lived in a four-story mansion, and somehow successfully stumbled (often drunk and stoned) through the whorehouse called Hollywood. I was an indoctrinated hardcore liberal. If you think I'm a spoiled dick and you hate me, then we're on the right track. But having a child 10 years ago changed my thinking. It gave me a certain respect for capitalism and even corporate America.

When I bought a new Hummer H2 back in 2002, I ordered a custom license plate that read U.S. WINS. I got it because I believed in the message. I wanted people to have a reaction to the plate, usually negative, and then examine their thinking. Would it be so bad to win this war? Plus, I knew it would fucking piss everyone in the city off because it was Los Angeles.

I could give two fucks about WMDs. There were much more important reasons to topple Saddam—terrorism being one of them. The root causes of terrorism are the lack of capitalism, the lack of democracy, and the lack of modern education. What has stood in the way of those things has primarily been the regimes of Iraq, Iran, and Syria. We just got one of them out of the way.

Before my first trip to Camp Kalsu, I was just another guy sitting on his couch who felt like he was getting a very biased perspective from the news. I wanted to find out firsthand what was happening in the Middle East. This story, and my documentary, revolves around three things: the daily lives of the marines, the larger political context of the war, and the story of an average American citizen that had no business there but wanted to learn what the fuck was going on. I'd used a video camera five times in my life before going there. I have no military background or training whatsoever. Other than having been the glorified executive producer from time to time, which is just being a guy in the office and occasionally being on set, I knew nothing technically about filmmaking. The only city in Iraq I could point to on a map was Baghdad. I knew jack fucking shit. And today even I can't believe I'm still alive.

Rolling With the Suicide Squad

Dressed in civvies and running around with a video camera, I stuck out. And the soldiers of the 1st Battalion, 2nd Marines had far more important matters on their minds than entertaining outsiders. One of my first interviews, a Cpl. Gilbert Jensen, summed it up: "Don't talk to me. I have nothing good to say." Still, they let me tag along. When I wasn't filming a patrol in the Triangle from the back of a Humvee, I went along on IED-hunting missions with the Suicide Squad in a convoy of LAV-25s. That's short for light armored vehicle, but the marines just called them pigs.

The back of a pig, basically a small eight-wheeled tank, is unbelievably claustrophobic and uncomfortable. You have to sit in that one spot, over and over and over, and you're cramped in there with six marines. It fucks with the mind. Like I said, the pigs are used primarily to find and clear the roads of IEDs, which they usually find by rolling over them and getting blown up.

The fear of random explosions was perfectly relentless. We all imagined things like being covered in diesel, burning, screaming from shrapnel sticking out of our eyes. The fact that I often sat over the fuel tank and one of the corporals referred to me as "the cooked chicken" only further fried my brain. I thought of my dick. I thought about the types of rounds and shrapnel that could pierce the pig's skin. I cataloged every bolt and bullet in my vicinity just to understand what would pierce my body should bad luck and ballistics conspire against me. These are the thoughts of the average marine's and this civilian's mind when out on the roads of Iraq. This was a war with no lulls; it just kept going and, therefore, eating at the mind. As one anonymous marine put it, "When I get home I'm going to be just like a dog who was locked in a small cage and constantly stabbed with a sharp stick." There are a lot of guys who will come back feeling the same way, and they might never change.

The rest of the story will seem to be a little bit sketchy and broad-stroked—because I'm stoned and a liar.

Subconsciously, I needed to get blown up to feel like an equal. It finally happened outside a small, nameless village in the Triangle while on a Humvee patrol. A small IED exploded, leaving me stunned, but the vehicle didn't take much damage—just a flat tire and a light shower of shrapnel. But IEDs, as Sgt. Brandon Welsh, one of the main subjects in Young Americans, can attest, vary in size. Welsh found the mother of all IEDs in a field when he discovered a jury-rigged 500-pound airplane bomb. Luckily for Welsh, the triggerman had left his post, probably scared off by one of the pigs. Welsh could only laugh after the Explosive Ordnance Division came out and blew the sucker. "Did you see the size of that fucking thing?"

I narrowly missed dying in one of the most catastrophic accidents since America invaded Iraq. During one of my forays out of the Triangle, I met members of the 1/3 headquartered in Camp Fallujah. Two marines, 1st Lt. Dustin Shumney and 1st Lt. Travis Fuller, asked me to ride along on a mission to the Syrian border. I wanted to think it was because they liked me. But it was because I've got the fucking camera. At the last minute I pulled Fuller to the side and said, "Look, dude, should I go on this mission? Are you guys going to be doing something exciting, or are you just going to be checking fucking driver's licenses coming from Syria?" After already asking me 100 times to go, he said, "Pat, to be really honest with you, that's probably all we're going to do. You should probably go back." On January 26, 2005, Fuller and Shumney died alongside 28 other marines and one sailor when their CH-53E Super Stallion transport chopper went down in a sandstorm, 220 miles west of Baghdad.

The wreckage left when a Humvee, on patrol in the Triangle of Death, ran over an antitank mine. Miraculously, all four marines survived.

Incredibly, in March 2005, I left my first stint unscathed. As the marines of 1/2 cycled out of Iraq, I planned a visit stateside before returning to Iraq and, more importantly, Ramadi. "Don't go to Ramadi, man—you're still alive," one of the marines, Lance Cpl. Charles Molinare, told me. "You've made it this far. Get on the pig with us. We're going to Kuwait. It's all going to be good. You've shot enough shit to win an Oscar." The only things going on in Baghdad were car bombs and IEDs. The last place where there was daily, full-on fucking action was in Ramadi. That's why I went there.

As RPGs came shrieking in relentlessly, the marines laid down a hail of lead.

Welcome to Ramadi

When I arrived in Ramadi in November 2005, it was clear that Satan had punched a hole in the Earth's surface, plopped down his throne, and set up shop. IED craters vastly outnumbered traffic signs. Giant chunks of twisted concrete and metal seemed to literally grow out of the ground everywhere you looked. The whole place looked like Frank Lloyd Wright had been given an unlimited supply of cash and meth. I had requested a posting at Camp Hurricane Point, the Marines' forward operating base, located at the westernmost tip of Ramadi on the bank of the Euphrates River.

I asked the corporal signing me into Camp Hurricane Point the same question I used whenever I went to a new combat outpost: "How often do y'all get mortared?"

"Three or four times a week," he replied. "All our roofs are tin." He was wrong. The mortars came every day.

Not to say that the marines patrolling Ramadi didn't give as good as they got. They blasted the shit out of everything in sight. The number of firefights staggered my mind. Daily life consisted of running patrols in Humvees or on foot, hunting insurgents, raiding suspected IED workshops, and dodging sniper fire. On my first night back in Iraq, I rode along for Operation Shank, a sweeping raid of southern Ramadi with the express goal of killing Al Qaeda terrorists linked to Abu Musab al-Zarqawi. As I filmed from the back of a Humvee, I said to myself, "Thirty-six hours ago I was in Beverly fucking Hills."

After roughly six months spent in Iraqi hot spots, my number finally came up on February 18, 2006. As I rode along packed into the back left seat of the lead Humvee a little before midnight, insurgents ambushed the fourth vehicle in our convoy. The Humvees came to a halt while the marines tried to assess casualties and kill every enemy in sight. Cpl. Matthew Conley, riding shotgun in my Humvee, could not raise the marines taking fire on the radio, so he got out of our vehicle to join the battle. As he stepped away, an insurgent on a rooftop above triggered a massive IED buried beneath the street. Conley died instantly. The concussion mortally wounded 2nd Lt. Almar Fitzgerald, the marine sitting six inches away from me in the backseat. I was thrown 30 feet out of the vehicle, my camera recording every second. As small-arms fire popped and RPGs came shrieking in, the marines laid down a deadly hail of lead. I crawled back to the Humvee, picking up my camera along the way. The firefight lasted an hour before our attackers fled or died. The marines stormed the house where the insurgents had lain in wait for us. On the roof I stood in the very spot from which a man had detonated the bomb that killed Conley and Fitzgerald and left my legs filled with shrapnel.

As physically fucked up as Ramadi had become, something very different was happening psychologically. The people were over the insurgency. The rest of Iraq was moving on, and the terrorists knew it. After the invasion, the vast majority of Iraq embraced the obviously positive change that fate had brought to the land. Ramadi, however, always belligerent, full of a history of rebelling against any outside authority and full of Sunni Baathists who had it made in the shade under Saddam, went gunning for the coalition and the new government from day one. The Marines set up an anonymous tip line, and the calls flooded in. They got so much intel, busted so many insurgents, dug up so many weapons caches, that the insurgents freaked out and blew up the phone lines from Ramadi to the Syrian border. The sheiks, the local leaders who once supported the insurgency, finally engaged in talks with us and gave the nod for the population to start cooperating. The police department began recruiting new members. An Al Qaeda suicide bomber blew up the first 100 recruits in line. I was there. It was hell. When I left Iraq last April, Ramadi was the last great holdout in Iraq. Today it remains the last stronghold of the terrorists. Once the war ends in Ramadi, the war will end in Iraq.

Coming Home

Making this movie cost me everything. I am a virtual outcast in Hollywood. After photos from a haircut party at Camp Iskandariyah made it back to the States, there were pictures of me with a new Mohawk and DIE shaved in my chest, and rumors swelled that I had finally snapped and turned into Travis Bickle, De Niro's character in Taxi Driver. No one in L.A. understood what men in a combat zone would do to break the monotony, to create a chance to laugh. My family will barely speak to me anymore because they lean so far to the left. My soon-to-be fourth ex-wife and I are in a legal battle over visitation rights for our daughter. I know I can't take care of my kid; I'm going back to Ramadi as soon as possible. It's terrifying to go there. There's a 10 percent chance you're going to die, there's a 30 percent chance you're going to be wounded, and there's a 100 percent chance that hot metal will go flying near your body.

Lance Cpl. Jonathan Acosta smokes a cigarette during a house search in the Triangle of Death.

The average marine was proud to be there doing his job. I have tape after tape of marines telling their liberal "rescuers" to go fuck themselves. They knew what they were doing there, that they were keeping Iraq from turning into a terrorist state that would have made Afghanistan under the Taliban look like Disneyland.

I'm not going into all the details. In fact, I'm barely scratching the surface. I made a documentary series for a reason. You can get some flavor at patdollar.com. Suffice it to say that many of my friends died, that I was wounded badly, blown up, and thrown out of vehicles. It's all on tape. Getting at the root of terror is clear: Topple these regimes and then bring democracy, capitalism, and education to the Islamic world. Let them have the hot wife, the Bimmer, and kids to live for. America has to lift them up, not because we are a country of great guys, but to keep them from growing into lost killer boys with the U.S. in their sights.

I'll be back among the Marines in Ramadi before year's end. Semper fi. M

ARIELLE KEBBEL

Things That Go Bump in the Night!

In The Grudge 2 this former Floridian beauty queen discovers life in Toyko isn't all Hello Kitty merchandise and electronic pets.

By Sean Cunningham Photographs by Craig De Cristo

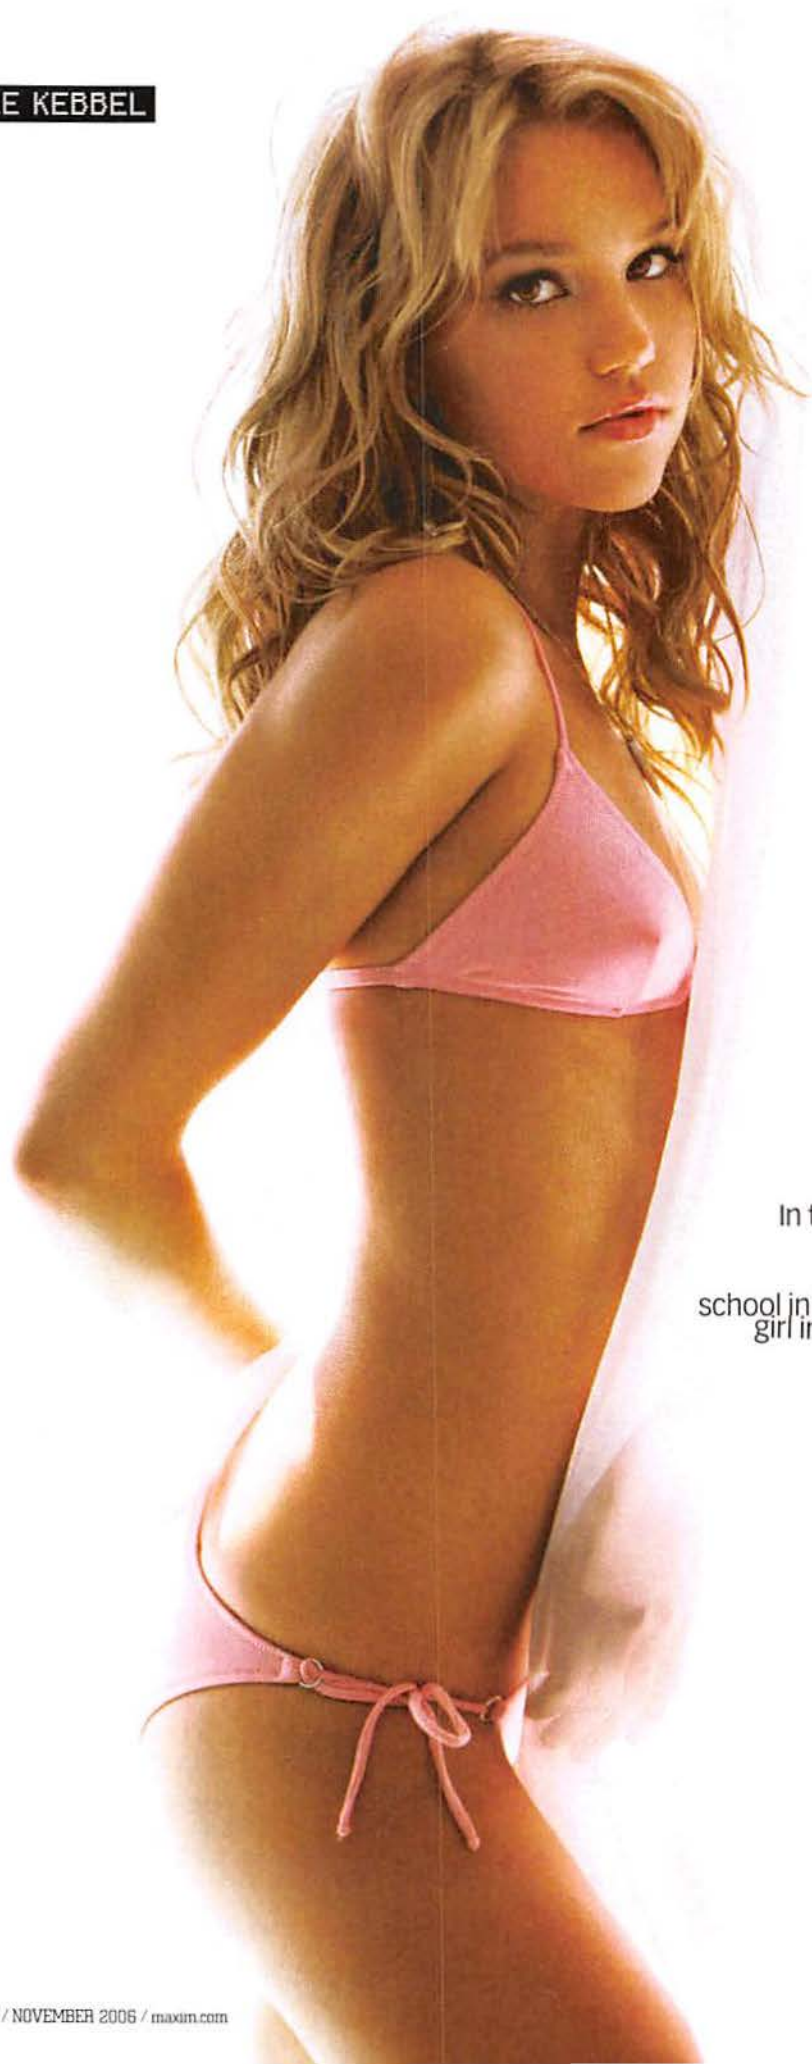

Even before Arielle Kebbel landed a juicy part in The Grudge 2, she drew crowds. "I got used to people asking for my autograph," Arielle has said. Granted, folks had her confused with Britney Spears, given the strong resemblance between the two (well, before Britney entered her barefoot-in-sweatpants phase). Today Arielle has no trouble attracting attention on her own, coming off this summer's John Tucker Must Die.

Arielle's rise has been rapid, even for Hollywood—the 21-year-old didn't even make her acting debut until 2002. She swiftly snagged roles in TV shows like Law & Order: SVU and parts in a number of movies. OK, so not all these films were masterpieces (unless we're overlooking a subtle nuance in American Pie Presents: Band Camp), but Kebbel's been a standout in all of them, especially her appearance in Entourage's pilot.

This month Arielle can say goodbye to direct-to-video sequels, starring in the sequel to Sarah Michelle Gellar's blockbuster.

"I play a nerdy wallflower studying at an international high school in Tokyo," says Arielle. The role called on the blonde bombshell to dye her hair black and get geeky—a transformation so extreme Arielle says she's "not the cutest girl in school" anymore. We'll believe that when we see it, Arielle. M

Asylum
Washington, D.C.
You've spent all week pretending to be responsible. Reward yourself with an early jump on the weekend. Starting at five on Saturdays, this metalhead bar pours beers for a quarter, then bumps up the price by a whopping 50 cents every hour. On the wagon? They also host ladies' Jell-O wrestling. No excuse not to go now.

Sammy's Roumanian
New York, NY
Forget bread and butter: Here it's chopped chicken liver with liquid fat. At this authentic Jewish eatery, you'll eat delicacies like karnatzlach (don't ask) and drink ice-block vodka amid blaring klezmer music and drunken hora dancing. Don't worry, they serve Alka-Seltzer.

Green Mill Jazz Club
Chicago, IL
Operated by Capone henchman "Machine Gun" Jack McGurn in the '20s, this grim landmark was the site of at least one Mob-related throat-slashing immortalized in the Sinatra flick The Joker Is Wild. We hope all your gambling debts are paid in full.

The Hump
Santa Monica, CA
A night out with the guys is never complete unless someone risks his life. To that end, visit this L.A. sushi joint from mid-November through February to order the highly poisonous fugu fish, which, if not properly prepared, leads to numbness, vomiting, and death. Happy eating!

Live Band Karaoke
Jamaica Plain, MA
It's a long way to the top if you wanna rock'n'roll, but you gotta start somewhere. Every other Tuesday, All-Star Karaoke at Boston's Milky Way Lounge & Lanes lets wannabes scream, kick, and shout in front of a live professional backing band. You'll sound even worse than Supernova!

The Clermont Lounge

Atlanta, GA Naïveté is cute, but sometimes a man needs a woman who's lived a little. Or in the case of the peelers at this dive strip joint, a whole lot. 10

CHICAGO, IL

Grow a 'stache and get down, Midwestern-style. Choose from 887 bars and clubs, like Marie's Rip Tide Lounge, where you can pound Schlitz and play Duck Hunt with the silver-haired owner till 4 A.M.—that's just hours away from a Windy City hangover.

NEW YORK CITY, NY

Get ready for an endless entertainment assault. From lighting up at Cigar Bar to filling up on Gray's Papaya hot dogs, you can do anything you want, anytime you want here, period. Got a problem with the place? Take it up with the friendly locals.

PORTLAND, OR

This hippie haven offers more than just vegans and patchouli oil—like the best punk and indie-rock shows this side of Seattle, and an unsettling concentration of protest-happy anarchists. For your own safety, try to contain your manic pro-Bush rants.

ATLANTA, GA

Welcome to the Dirrrty, home of Lil' Jon, Michael Vick, an exhausting 100 festivals, and a ridiculous collection of sizzling Southern belles. Watch 'em shake their booties at DJ haven Mark Ultralounge, and see if the city lives up to its nasty nickname.

AUSTIN, TX

No geezers here—over a third of the city is between 21 and 34, probably thanks to the now-legendary music scene. Besides the yearly South by Southwest festival, Sixth Street District's live venues book up-and-coming bands nightly. Can't handle it?

HOUSTON, TX

The best things in life aren't free, but sometimes they're real cheap. Drinks in H-town average $3.75 a pop, and when you factor in the finger-lickin' barbecue and down-to-earth Texan girls (think Jenna Bush), the city doesn't seem as bad as it actually is.

NASHVILLE, TN

Get yer boots shined up for a trip to the country music capital. Visit honky-tonk joints like the Tootsie's Orchid Lounge, where American badasses Willie Nelson and Johnny Cash used to toss 'em back, and do your best to follow in their footsteps.

NEW ORLEANS, LA

Katrina be damned—when it comes to partying, the Big Easy's still as hot as a Cajun crawdad. Landmarks like Pat O'Brien's and Mid City Lanes are still standing, and Mardi Gras—America's cheapest, longest-running titty-show—is back in full effect.

MILWAUKEE, WI

Recently named America's "thirstiest" city, Milwaukee eats, sleeps, and burps beer. Home to the Miller Brewing Company, Brewers ball club, and over 500 bars, it guarantees a drinking buddy and a tasty, kraut-covered brat at every turn. Bottoms up!

LAS VEGAS, NV

If debauchery were a religion, Vegas would be Mecca. The Strip is America's longest continuous stretch of playground, with neon lights 24/7 and casinos and strippers proudly sucking your wallet dry. To which we say, thank you, sir, may we have another!

BEHIND YOUR VELVET HOPES

Jenifer Rosero, partner at event-planning powerhouse Bolthouse Productions and longtime gatekeeper

1 THREE AMIGOS

"Three guys can sometimes get into bigger clubs because girls don't spend money. But the tunnel narrows the more you come with. If you're bringing four or five guys with no connection, your chances are slim. Agree to buy a table and you'll have a better shot."

Verdict: Good luck, fellas!

2 DISTINGUISHED GENTLEMAN

"Forty-year-old men can usually get in because they're probably going to spend money. But the question here is how he's going to act around girls. Why is this guy here? To observe? Or is he just lonely?"

Verdict: Fine, but tip generously and don't leer at the pretty young things.

3 BIG MAN

"Unfortunately, we live in a visual world. That's just the way it works. But if this guy is cool, dresses right, and has a good attitude, he gets in. Look at rappers like Fat Joe who have hot women around them morning, noon, and night."

Verdict: Why not? The booths are big enough for everybody.

4 HANGER-ON

"Yes, yes, yes. One guy with a bunch of girls is always going to get in, 100 percent of the time."

Verdict: Right this way to the center of attention, spedily!

5 WANKSTA

"This guy's not getting in unless he's a legit rapper. But even most rappers today—at least the ones who've got it going on—don't dress like that anymore."

Verdict: No dice. Try the gym around the corner, homeslice.

6 REGULAR JOE

"Depends on the person and his posture. Be confident. Carry yourself like you're cool, don't be obnoxious, and just wait patiently."

Verdict: Your style leaves something to be desired, but we'll let it slide.

to some of L.A.'s hottest spots, breaks down who can and can't slip by a club's clipboard police.

7 EUROTRASH

"There's a big difference between what's cool there and what's cool here. Jewelry is prevalent in the Euro style, things like medallions. It's a cultural thing. Even people like David and Victoria Beckham might not get in if they weren't who they are."

Verdict: Nein, danke!

8 NAME DROPPER

"I detest this. Remember, I know the real people whose names you're dropping. I love to call them up and humiliate people. I think it teaches them a lesson. If you really know someone, have them call ahead for you."

Verdict: Not tonight, pal...looks like your "boy" let you down.

9 DRUNKEN BUFFOON

"Unless he's famous or a regular who always spends lots of money, this guy's never getting in. And if we do let him in, we're definitely not serving him."

Verdict: How about taking a nice taxi ride home instead?

10 CUDDLY TWOSOME

"Couples are a safe bet because they don't get into trouble. Plus, a guy on a date will spend a decent amount of money."

Verdict: You two are too adorable—or harmless—not to be allowed inside.

11 MOD-SQUAD HIPSTER

"This look is for a real fashion-conscious guy—or someone in a band. You have to wear it with the right attitude. Bigger guys who try to get into skinny jeans, unless they are old-school punk rockers, just look stupid."

Verdict: If your band's album isn't climbing the charts, forget it.

12 BILL FLASHER

"Door people hate being offered money. It's very insulting and vulgar. We're not prostitutes. You can't just buy us off."

Verdict: Denied! This isn't a third-world traffic stop, you know. ❌

Ask The Expert

Getting over "the HUMP"?

The "sex secret" that may improve your sexual fitness & erection quality at the same time.

SAID:

"He was truly LARGE and IN CHARGE. Believe me, it just keeps getting better & better."

Q: Dear Steffanie,

For the past few weeks, I've been having some difficulty performing. I am 32 and for the first time in my life, I have a "drop dead gorgeous" 24 year old girlfriend, so every time we have sex, it's really important to me that I "perform like a champ". Basically, I'm not sure if it's nerves, but my erection just isn't as firm as I would like it to be. I don't think I need a prescription, and "Herbal pills" never live up, I know, I've tried them! Is there anything out there that can get me "over the hump" faster or more effectively? I need something fast before she starts looking at younger men!

Kevin R.
Cincinnati, OH

A: Kevin,

When it comes to the "hump", I'm a bit of an expert, and this question is a pretty common one, so Kevin you're not alone!

My fiancé is about your age, and when he had some trouble with the "hump", I noticed how much it really affected his performance in and out of the bedroom and believe me, I wanted him back on top of his game as much as he did! So, we did a little research, we spoke to his doctor and got on the Internet. We learned that male enhancement is all about stimulation and for lack of a better term, "exercise".

That's right, fellas. Just like anything else, you've got to use it or lose it!

I found a product that was right on target with what the experts were saying - "Maxoderm" (www.maxoderm.com). It has a 97% customer satisfaction rate and 100% guaranteed, so we decided to order it. The results were immediate and very impressive! When it arrived, my fiancé tried it right away (he never thought "exercise" would be so much fun).

Needless to say, later that night, we had the most phenomenal, mind blowing sex, EVER.

He took control right from the start and I had never seen him more confident (or rock hard!). He was truly "large and in charge"! And believe me, it just keeps getting better and better. It is an understatement to say that we're both huge fans of Maxoderm!

HERE'S WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW:
Maxoderm IS Instant Male Enhancement!
Recommended by a Leading Physician, it's the only all-natural, fast-acting topical lotion designed to instantly enhance erection quality and firmness - upon application. Is that fast enough for you? It is easy to be fooled by the companies selling those "miracle" sex pills claiming to grow your penis 3 - 4 inches. But the facts just don't bear out. In fact, as little as 5% of the pills actually make it into your system.

HERE'S HOW YOU GET IT:

You can check out Maxoderm by calling 1-800-660-7968 or going to www.maxoderm.com. I know they offer RISK FREE TRIALS and even give a FREE MONTH SUPPLY with your order. Oh and best of all, Maxoderm has a 97% customer satisfaction rate and is backed by a 90 Day Money Back Guarantee. highly recommend you give it a try - it worked for us!

Delightfully Yours,

Steffanie Seaver
